

G. O. P. Badly Divided On Navy Money Bill; House to Vote Today

Practically All Republican Leaders in House Are Arrayed Against Harding and Navy Department.

DEMOCRATS ARE ALSO DIVIDED ON QUESTION

President Wants Naval Personnel of 86,000, While Bill Reported Offers Only 67,000.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON,
Constitution Bureau

Washington, April 14.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Republican leaders tonight, after a day of barage fighting on the floor of the house, and on the eve of the navy bill vote
tomorrow that will test the anti-administration strength in that body, are in the throes of the most desperate conflict in the history of factional politics in the nation. It arises out of the party division as to the personnel strength of the navy following the adoption of the international reduction ratio of 5-5-3.

Its significance, however, reaches far beyond this purely naval issue, in that it is also a direct fight on and defense of the newly created functions of the house appropriations committee, following the adoption of the budget system, and it is also a direct attack on and defense of the administrative branch of the government which has come out flat-footed-ly in opposition to the appropriation committee's provision in the naval appropriation bill for only 67,000 men all told as against the demand for 86,000 was made by the house
naval affairs committee.

The war has arrayed on one side House Leader Mondell and practically all the house republican heavyweights
and on the other President Harding, Secretary Denby and the general staff of admirals as well as the majority of the house naval affairs committee.

Situation Explained.
To understand intelligently the situation the naval committee decided that 86,000 men was the complement necessary to maintain the new ratio fixed by the disarmament conference.

The white house and navy department and the staff officers took the same view. The appropriations committee, however, the duties of which are not legislative, restricted the proposed appropriation to 67,000 men, thus, it is claimed, legislating by indirect action, contrary to law, and the 67,000 viewpoint has been accepted by the house leaders for political purposes in the approaching congressional campaign, where alleged government economy will be made an issue.

Thus the battle rages with the breach between republican party heads widening all the time. In the meantime the democrats are also split on the question, and the Georgia delegation will be strongly divided when the question comes to a vote.

Crisp for Higher Figure.
In a short speech before the house
today, Representative Charles B.
Crisp, of Georgia, strongly advocated a personnel of 86,000.

Judge Crisp, who is a member of the ways and means committee, declared that any reduction in the personnel beyond the figure recommended would prevent the government from carrying out its full program under the 5-5-3 ratio. He pointed out that the majority of the naval committee, after exhaustive hearings on the subject had decided on the force named,
and that the secretary and assistant secretary of the navy, who are charged with the duty of managing the navy, have said it was necessary to have 86,000 to maintain the ratio. This unilateral recommendation, he declared, should be of sufficient force to convince congress of the importance of the proposal.

Turning to the democratic side of the question, Crisp said:

Band, Soloist and Story By Radio for Children

Nearly fifty kiddies out at the Georgia Children's home receiving station will be entertained by radio between the hours of 6 and 7 o'clock tonight by a concert by Bachman's Million-Dollar band and vocal solos by C. S. Robey, baritone, accompanied by Mrs. George H. Sims on the piano.

The concert for the benefit of the children was arranged by The Atlanta Constitution co-operating with the Atlanta Masonic club, which is sponsoring the work being done at the home.
In addition to the children at the home, others to hear the concert will be members of the board of directors and the board of governors of the home.

Friday afternoon The Constitution installed a receiving set made by Charles Kelley, of 303 North Moreland avenue, and it is with this device with the loud speaker attachment that the children will receive the concert which will be broadcasted by The Constitution from WGM.

COMMITTEE HEARS GENERAL HARBORD TELL ARMY NEEDS

Senate Appropriations Body Is Told That Army
Limited to 115,000 Cannot Do Work.

MINIMUM OF 150,000
DESIRED BY GENERAL

He Says Preparedness Before War Would Have Saved Huge Expense in Prosecution of Conflict.

Washington, April 14.—(By The Associated Press.)—The question of military preparedness arose today in the senate appropriations committee during its consideration of the army appropriation bill. Discussion of the subject was brief, but senators said
the question of a national policy had grown out of the fight over the house reduction in the size of the army.

Major General J. G. Harbord, deputy chief of staff, and Brigadier General William Lassiter, in charge of military operations and training, appeared before the committee to present the war department's views on the subject of the house cut, the former insisting that the organization was strained to the breaking point now under the forced reduction of a year ago, and the latter describing the plan adopted by the department for building up at low expense the forces required in a national emergency.

"If the provision is not made for 150,000 men," said General Harbord, "then we who are charged with operation and maintenance of the work must ask congress to re-state for us the mission of the army."

Hitchcock Differs.

The statement followed a series of questions by Senator Hitchcock, democrat, Nebraska, who contended that the "European idea" of preparedness had been proved wrong by the world war. General Harbord declared that the United States would have saved much money upon which it is now paying interest if it had been properly prepared for the war. The work done by the American army, he contended, was at extraordinary expense, "and would have availed nothing had not gallant little France held the line until we got our machinery going."

Mr. Hitchcock argued that the United States had "fooled" all Europe in getting actively and effectively into the fray in less than a year. To this,
the general answered that had the preparation taken place ahead of the declaration of war, Germany "might have felt different about engaging us."
"We did it in a year, true," continued General Harbord, "but had we lived up to the national defense act, carried out its terms in good faith,
we certainly would have saved immense sums that now enter into the public debt upon which we are paying $551,000,000 interest annually."

To Fulfill Mission.
General Harbord pressed the need for officers and men to do "what the public expects of us." It is the work outside of the actual army functions that requires the extra personnel, he declared, adding that congress by its appropriations and otherwise had shown that it believed such work was worth while and thus the army had come to regard it as "our mission."
He reiterated that to cut down the strength to 115,000 as proposed by the house meant that "something something"

Doesn't This Violate That Clause About Inhuman Punishment?

Omaha, Neb., April 14.—Roy Mahoney today began emptying into a bathtub 3,200 bottles of home brewed beer without touching a drop, in conformity with a sentence imposed by Police Judge Wapwick, when Mahoney was arraigned on a charge of intoxication and was unable to pay a $10 fine.

After explaining that 3,200 bottles of liquor had been seized at another man's home recently, Judge Wapwick passed sentence on Mahoney as follows: "It shall be your punishment to empty each and every bottle separatly into a bathtub. The plug must be inserted and when the tub is full you may let the beer flow down the drain. Under no circumstances shall you touch a drop of the brew, but shall pour and pour and pour until all is gone."

A police captain stood by.

BEAUTIFUL SERVICES ARE PROMISED SUNDAY

759 Additions to Church Reported by Baptists.
Dr. Wiggins to Attend
General Conference.

Closing services featured by special music and sermons suggestive of the Easter spirit will be held Sunday morning and evening in all of the 120 Protestant churches of Atlanta as a grand finale to the most successful city-wide religious revival ever held in Atlanta.

Besides having resulted in many conversions, the campaign, with its scores of brilliant speakers and evangelists, has been the means of causing thousands already affiliated with churches to re-consecrate themselves anew in church services.

Leaders in the great movement are proud of the success that has marked the revival. Expressions of satisfaction were forthcoming from all sections Friday, both from visiting and local divines who have played such prominent parts in making the campaign a success.

Last Week-End Services.

The last week-end services before the concluding sermons of the revival Sunday in the Baptist churches were held Friday night. Rev. W. W. Hamilton, of Washington, who has assisted Dr. C. W. Daniels, the pastor of the First Baptist church, in conducting the services, preached to a large attendance. At this meeting the total additions to the Baptist churches thus far reported during the two weeks revival were 759 persons.

Dr. T. H. Lewis, of Washington, will preach a sermon Sunday morning at Wesley Memorial church. "The Resurrection" will be the subject of Dr. Lewis. Special music from a selected choir who will render Easter songs is announced. Dr. Lewis will preach his last sermon of the revival Sunday night. He will leave immediately afterwards for Miami, Fla., where he will conduct a revival.

The Rev. B. F. Fraser, pastor of Wesley Memorial, declared Friday he had never heard finer sermons than those delivered by Dr. Lewis.

SHOALS HEARINGS TO BEGIN MONDAY

Senate Committee Will Get to Work Considering Five Offers for Plant
Next Week.

Washington, April 14.—Actual investigation of the five offers for development of the government's war initiated projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala., will begin Monday before the senate agriculture committee. Chairman Norris announced today that Thomas
Martin, president of the Alabama Power company, would be called then to present the offer the power company has made for construction of the Wilson dam and operation of the other power projects connected with these properties.

Members of the house military committee adjourned today until Monday
when the inter-committee discussions of the four private proposals they already have examined will be continued. Chairman Kahn said he was "pleasantly surprised" by the progress being made, and expected the committee to agree unanimously upon the proposals.

ALLEGED MESSAGE GIVEN BY TUMULTY DENIED BY WILSON

Says He Never Authorized "Message" Delivered at Jefferson Day Dinner, Honoring Cox.

ACTION IS HARD BLOW
AT G. O. P. CAMPAIGNS

Interpreted as Meaning Wilson Will Insist on
G. O. P.'s "Inefficiency Record" as Leading Issue

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON,
Constitution Bureau

Washington, April 14.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Ex-President Wilson's letter to The New York Times, repudiating the Jefferson day dinner "message" delivered by his former secretary as not being authorized by him, has caused one of the biggest political sensations of recent months in Washington. It is looked upon as a complete demolition of carefully laid republican campaign plans.

The repudiated dinner "message" conveyed by Joseph Tumulty, was interpreted throughout the country as an intended boost for former Governor Cox's presidential nomination in 1924, and as making the league of nations the chief issue in the forthcoming elections, although there was nothing specifically said on the subject in the message. This interpretation was natural from the settings of the occasion, it being in reality
a meeting of Cox's friends.

Political leaders at the capital tonight see in the Wilson statement one of the most significant pieces of news since the Wilson statement of the day before. It is interpreted as a repudiation of the Wilson statement of the day before. It is interpreted as a repudiation of the Wilson statement of the day before. It is interpreted
as a repudiation of the Wilson statement of the day before.

Clears Party Skies.

The repudiation of the New York message is not considered as a repudiation of the democratic titular leader's political aspirations, nor as a boost for any other factor that may develop in the 1924 pre-convention campaign.
It is merely a repudiation of Mr. Wilson's attitude of reticence since his retirement from office. But coming as it does it has clarified the horizon of several cloud flecks.

Since the speech by former Governor Cox in New York republican leaders at the capital have attempted by every means possible to draw democrats into an acceptance of the league
as the paramount issue for the coming election, for the express purpose,
it is declared, to sidetrack the whole criticism of the majority party which has swept the country during the last six months and is increasing in velocity today.

Senator McCormick, one of the recognized spokesmen of the republican party, has twice in as many days challenged democrats on the floor of the senate to identify themselves with the Versailles instrument. His purpose has been so conspicuous that republicans are beginning to fear that his attempt has been carried too far, in that independent publications have openly asserted that the party was fearful of the political results if considered by the G. O. P. record thus far.
Although no statement accompanied the speech.

Man Who Defied Posse, On Trial For Killing Wife

Stanley Aylor Tells Houston Jury He Killed Her in Self-Defense.

Perry, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—
The case against Stanley Aylor for the murder of his wife, Agnes, on March 13, was tried in Houston superior court today.

His statement consumed two and three-quarter hours.

The jury was still out late tonight.
He told of his married life year by year from the date of his marriage in 1915 to the time of the killing. He stated his wife threatened to kill him several times and did attempt it several times, and on March 13 she told him that he had to kill her or she would kill him. They lived in a tent about one mile west of town, he said, and on that day she was mad with him. She went in the tent and got her rifle and went out in front of the tent, he said. He went in the tent, thinking she had his pistol, but he was on the shelf and put it in his pocket and walked out in front of the tent.
His wife, he said, drew the rifle and fired.

Now W. J. B. Wants Law To Bar Inspiration For Dry Editorials

Chicago, April 14.—W. J. Bryan, addressing students of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern university tonight on newspaper ethics, declared the "next great law
we need is one making it a criminal offense for a man to write an editorial on prohibition while he is drunk."
"Some of them I have read," he added, "bear unmistakable evidence of

VIOLENCE OPENS EASTER WEEK-END IN CITY OF DUBLIN

Soldiers of Rebel Army Seize Hotel, Following Precedent of Bloody Rebellion in 1916.

FIRING BREAKS OUT
ALL OVER THE CITY

Gravest Fears of Widespread Disorders During Week-End Are Aroused
by Outbreak.

Dublin, April 14.—The long-feared Easter disturbances began here on Good Friday when soldiers of the rebel army seized and barricaded Four Courts hotel, which was the first building captured in the famous Easter rebellion of 1916.

Gravest fears of widespread disorders throughout Dublin during the week-end were aroused by the first violent outbreak.

Dublin residents in the vicinity of the Four Courts hotel fled when the rebels took possession. The soldiers, armed with revolvers, were without uniforms for the most part and appeared to be young countrymen. A British soldier and a girl were wounded in the shooting that accompanied the outbreak.

Indiscriminate firing broke out in various parts of the city.
Great uneasiness prevailed inasmuch as when the true conference broke up without reaching an agreement, anti-treaty soldiers could give no guarantee that acts of violence would be avoided during the weekend.

The attacking force numbered four hundred, with General Bredrick O'Connor in command. Occupants of the Four Courts were ejected and the rebels immediately set to work fortifying the hotel and piling sandbags at all windows. Art O'Connor, leader of the rebel group, declared that the occupation should not be considered a coup d'etat or the beginning of a revolution. But that the anti-treaty forces, he said, intended to make the seized buildings the headquarters of their army and would not permit any legal business to be transacted. The judges on the high court of justice, who sit in the Four Courts, were absent from the city on their Easter holiday.

No resistance was offered to the attackers, who came up in two bodies.
The constable inside and the sergeant constable on duty outside the building were captured, but subsequently released. Guests were ejected and passengers were commandeered to fill sandbags.

Well informed sources here believe the true conference failed even to reach a basis of discussion, and are therefore pessimistic over the hope of a settlement.

Arthur Griffiths will address a big Sunday meeting at Sligo; De Valera will speak at Tuam and Collins at Kildare.

The Final Sentence Of This Little Yarn May Mean A Lot

New York, April 14.—Donald C.
Sharpsteen, married six months ago,
wants to take his wife's maiden name,
and drop his own.

In a petition filed with Supreme Court Justice Delehanty, Sharpsteen said his wife's property is held in her maiden name, and he thought it would simplify the family finances if he adopted her family name of Van Klype.

"It's a poor rule that doesn't work
both ways," the bride said. "Besides,
it's more in the nature of a technical procedure." She is 45 and the husband 28.

in this Long Island town that one outfit starts a blaze in order to beat another to the scene, are being investigated, Assistant District Attorney

tonight.

"In fact," he said, "we have learned that bets have been made on the race."

CONFERENCE FATE RESTS ON SOLVING RUSS DEBT TANGLE

How Much of Old Regime Debts Shall Soviet Assume, Is Big Problem
at Genoa.

TCHITCHERIN RESISTS
VIEWPOINT OF ALLIES

Says No Nation Intends
Payment of War Debts,
So Why Should Soviet Assume These?

BY RALPH H. TURNER,
United News Staff Correspondent

Genoa, April 14.—The fate of Genoa now seems to hang on the question of the old Russian debt.

A complicated and delicate situation has developed over just how much of the old czarist and Kerevsky debts the soviets shall be held responsible for. It is a tangle which will require all the mastery and resourcefulness of Premier Lloyd George to unravel.

Leading conference figures wrestled over the problem at an all-day session at Lloyd George's villa, pausing only for lunch. But late Friday night found them still without prospect of an agreement.

The old realignment reappeared during the discussion with Russian foreign Minister Tchitcherine stubbornly fighting the recommendations of the allied economic experts, Lloyd George inclining to the conciliatory and Bar-thou, of France, maintaining the French irreconcilable attitude.

Holds Parley Fate.

Tchitcherine, by his determined opposition to the recommendations, has worked himself into a strategic position and may almost be said to hold the fate of the conference in his hand.
He has it within his power either to drive a compromise bargain by yielding at certain points, or to refuse to give in at all and force the allies, if they do anything at all, to do it over the protest of Russia—a situation which might arouse sympathy for the soviets, on the ground that their sovereign rights were being usurped.

Tchitcherine, resisting the allied recommendations, insisted that Russia should not be compelled to pay the czarist and Kerevsky obligations because no countries intended to pay their war debts. Britain and France, he pointed out, had not paid their debts to the United States. Furthermore, he declared, Russia did not intend to Genoa to put her head in a noose whereby future generations would be enslaved with heavy inden-tities.

All at Same Table.

"The British are apparently willing to modify the recommendations somewhat, but France is strongly insisting that they stand unchanged."

The whole fate of the conference is admittedly turning on the Russian reply to this phase of the economic question which asks her to give fixed guarantees for the purpose of insuring protection for foreign capital invested for reconstruction.

The informal conference at Lloyd George's villa Friday was participated in by Barthou, of France; Schanzer, of Italy; Thelens, of Belgium, and three leading Russian delegates, Tchitcherine, Litvinoff and Krassin, besides numerous experts.

Organized—Swears War to

Chicago, April 14.—With five char-

"The world's flippiest-flappers"—the Royal Order of Flappers was duly organized here Friday.

A national call for recruits will be broadcast. It is a "war to the death on reformers."

In organizing, the five "flippiestflappers" made it plain that their organization was in no way connected with or sympathetic with the Shifters, originating in the east for the avowed purpose of flouting propriety and convention.

With the slogan: "A fig for convention and a figleaf for attire," the Royal Order of Flappers, headed by the Flippant Flappers, got an auspicious start.

9,512 ATTENDANCE SLATED TO BRING CUP TO ATLANTA

Large Crowd Sees Crack-

in First Local Baseball Game of Season.

ONLY NEW ORLEANS
LEFT IN RUNNING

Memphis, With 8,204 Paid Admissions, Out of the Race, While Birmingham Has But 9,200 Fans.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Running true to all baseball traditions, Atlanta Friday turned out a mighty crowd that overflowed Ponce de Leon to see the opening game of the Southern association 1922 season played by the Crackers and Chat-ta-nooga. The official attendance as announced by President R. J. Spiller was 9,512, which virtually assured Atlanta of again winning the attendance cup. Birmingham, believed to be Atlanta's chief rival for the cup, had 9,200 paid admissions. The huge crowd was rewarded with a rattling good game in which the Crackers easily trounced the Chattanooga
Lookouts to the tune of 5 to 0.

Although a high wind and threatening clouds appeared a short time before the time for the game to begin,
they seemed to have little effect on the crowd, and the people swarmed into the stands, out into the bleachers and finally into the playing field itself. When the game started the weather was ideal.

Bulleting late last night stated that Memphis, winners of the 1921 pennant and holders of the Southern league record for attendance for the full season, had a very disappointing opening. This is a poor showing, inasmuch as Memphis only recently completed construction of stands which will seat in the neighborhood of 15,000.

Birmingham fans turned out en masse to see their diamond heroes in action, but fell about 300 shy of the mark reached by Atlanta. It had been freely predicted by Magic City scribes that Birmingham would establish a new attendance record.

New Orleans is the only city left to compete with Atlanta, the Crescent City being slated to hold their opening ceremonies this afternoon. Atlanta would have little to fear from New Orleans under ordinary circumstances, but Saturday is a good baseball day in any community and hundreds will flock to Heinenmann park today who would otherwise remain in their offices. This gives New Orleans a distinct advantage over other cities in the circuit, but Heinenmann park is small as compared to Ponce de Leon.

lican man and woman in Fulton county before the registration books close has been undertaken by the Fulton county organization of one of the existing republican factions. The organization was formed Wednesday night at a meeting in Taft hall when Dr. Joseph Jacobs was elected chairman. J. W. Weaver was named secretary, and St. Clair Gibbs was made treasurer. The officers, all of whom are white, were elected to serve for two years. Dr. Jacobs is president of Jacobs' pharmacy. Mr. Weaver is a Pullman car conductor. St. Clair Gibbs is a local attorney. Delegates to the state convention recently called for Taft hall on April 20 have been selected as follows: Dr. Joseph Jacobs, J. W. Weaver, Dr. F. H. Peck, St. Clair Gibbs, B. J. Davis, colored, and Selins Butler, colored. Alternates are Jackson McHenry, J. W. Sappington, R. L. Craddock, A. T. San, R. L. Craddock, A. T. Weldon, Mamie Pringle, and Frank S. Brown.

bed at a local hotel Friday morning with a bullet wound in the heart. Coroner Paul Donohoe ordered an inquest to be held at the undertaking parlors of T. C. Bazemore Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Mr. White had been indicted by the Houston county grand jury on the charge of embezzling $1,705.00 from the New Life Insurance Company for which he worked up until several months ago. He had been brooding over his trouble since the true bill was found last week. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Maud White, a daughter, Mrs. M. W. Snow, and a brother, W. H. White of Chipley. Funeral arrangements have not been completed. As a result of the lack of preparedness, the United States was compelled to expend during the 10 months of fighting in the world war the sum of $24,000,000,000.

PRECEDENCE FIGHT LOOMS IN SENATE

Washington, April 14.—Dispute threatens as to whether the tariff or bonus bill should have right of way in the senate.

President Harding, it was said at the white house, believes that the tariff bill should be enacted first. This measure is now before the senate, after having passed in the house. The committee for some time has been working on the bonus bill, but Chairman McCumber, of the finance committee, wants the bonus bill reported out and passed at once, the tariff in the meantime to be laid aside. The bonus bill, having passed the house, is now before the committee, and McCumber wants to report it out quickly.

McCumber's position, which is wide where would have to crack, would have to go on.

In connection with the army reduction, General Harbord said that it had been necessary to "close" nine military attaché offices. He included among those closed: Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Ecuador, not naming the others.

He also told the committee that the war department was again seriously considering the abandonment of some of the army posts and the concentration of the forces into those retained.

It was disclosed also that the department contemplates an early "scattering" of the first and third divisions, now stationed at Camp Dix, N. J., and Camp Lewis, Wash., respectively. The troops of the first division will be distributed around the New York post, General Harbord said, while those of the third division will be placed in various parts of the Pacific northwest. One of the reasons given for the transfer of the troops was that the barracks of the two war-time camps were "literally in some instances were in such condition that men, discharged, would not re-enlist.

GOING TO PIECES"

A potential army of 2,000,000 men is the goal set by the war department in laying its plans for national defense, according to General Lassieter. The 2,000,000 men army would be composed of three forces, he said, one being assigned to the regulars, two-sixths to the national guard and three-sixths to the organized reserve.

As in the world war, in time of hostilities these forces would be at once merged into a homogeneous entity, under the unified federal control.

If the broad plan on which work is now progressing is abandoned, he warned the committee, the United States "will have to face in the next war the same chaotic conditions as have been experienced in the present.

DISASTROUS FLOOD HITS MIDDLE WEST

were born in the tent city Friday. The river is eighteen miles wide here, covering the entire valley.

Heavy rains throughout the central west Friday caused flood warnings to be sent out by government officials here. In the midst of these warnings came reports of intense wind and hail storms. The schoolhouse at O'Fallon, Ill., was lifted from its foundations by a cyclone Friday just a few minutes before the children, having recess, were to be called back to classes.

Barns, houses and other buildings were destroyed in this district, while near St. Louis, reports declared, trees were uprooted, roofs blown away, and

LEAVES LEAKING

In Indiana, where the lowlands have been flooded for weeks, the Wabash river continued to rise and flood warnings were sent out even in the northern part of the state.

The levees at Vincennes are reported leaking badly, with hundreds of guards working day and night to save thousands of acres of valuable farm land. Farmers in all bottom lands around Vincennes are gathering their belongings and hurrying to higher ground.

Reports from Wisconsin say that the Wisconsin river has left its banks at many points and that lowlands are flooded for miles. Cities are flooded, flood plants have been inundated and power shut off.

This general condition is causing costly delay in spring plowing and seeding. Farmers are wading through their fields in hip-boats instead of so far.

any), hang out a perfumed pill smoke screen, wear gaudy earrings and lead the opposite sex a merry, merry chase. "Arma Virumque Cano!" is the battle cry.

In unadulterated curb latin, it means: "Arms and the man, I sing." The charter members, indignant at the criticisms of reformers, are Miss Margaret Benson, 17; Yvonne Vigneault, 18; Alma Heuss, 17; Dolly O'Toole, 20; and Peggy Drenner, 18.

Miss Persell was elected the flipper-flapper and Miss Vigneault the scribbler-money-box, or, again in curb chat, the secretary-treasurer of the organization.

Here are the by-laws:

"Whereas the Constitution of the official name of the organization shall be the Royal Order of the Flapper. The chief officer shall be known as the flipper-flapper, and the secretary-treasurer shall be known as the scribbler-money-box. Each member shall be expected to contribute 10 per cent of her scrap cash for one month. The members agree that they shall take orders only from their parents, and not from any so-called reformers or others.

CONFERENCE FATE RESTS ON RUSSIA

length the allied statesmen are going to placate Russia and work out a solution acceptable to her. Tchitcherin had asked a 24-hour delay in which to study the economic report. This was extended to 48 hours when the allies learned that Tchitcherin was not inclined to accept the recommendations.

Then another postponement was granted ostensibly because of Good Friday, but in reality to give time for the informal and private negotiations now going on. Formal consideration of the report may occur next week. Informal discussions will be continued Saturday.

While it is insisted that the sole purpose of this delay is to allow Russia time to prepare her reply, it is no secret that the reason is due to the fact that the allied representatives are endeavoring to effect a private agreement with Tchitcherin that will prevent an open controversy in the formal meeting of the commission.

George's Wisdom Apparent

The wisdom of Lloyd George insisting at Cannes that delegates to Genoa have plenary powers is now apparent as it permits the nations so represented to effect private but absolutely binding agreements. France is at a disadvantage in this, as her delegates alone are without full power to make decisions.

This gives the conference leaders an opportunity to concentrate on the vital political questions leaving the commissions to work out solutions of technical matters. In other words, the finance and other commissions are mere camouflage for covering up the work of the delegates with plenary powers who are dealing with the bigger subjects.

The Russians deny reports that they asked for delay in order to consult Moscow, pointing out that they had plenary powers.

Indications are that the Russians will finally grant whatever guarantees are deemed necessary after driving the hardest bargain possible. Tchitcherin is, therefore, in the most important position during the private negotiations now going on. As expected, he is centering his attention on the recognition of the war debts and the proposed institution of special tribunals for cases in Russia involving foreigners.

VICTOR ARTISTS APPEAR TONIGHT IN CONCERT HERE

Known to thousands by their voice in popular and classic songs and monologues but never before having appeared in Atlanta in person the eight famous Victor artists, to whom credit is due for having "urned out hundreds of records for the Victor, will present a program of unusual features Saturday night at the Auditorium.

The Victor Eight is composed of Henry Burr, tenor; Billy Murray, tenor; comedian; Frank Croxton, bass; Moore Silver, monologist; John Meyer, baritone; Fred Van Eps, banjoist; Albert Campbell, tenor and Frank Banta, pianist and accompanist.

The concert is being fostered by the Cable Piano company, and other Atlanta representatives of the Victor Phonograph company. Advance seat sales indicate that there will be a large attendance at the Auditorium.

Three Bodies Wait For Annual Meeting Of Horse Traders

Bodies of three members of the well-known band of "Irish Horse Traders" now lie in the vault of Greenberg & Bond awaiting burial, which will take place on April 25 when in keeping with its long established custom the band will gather in Atlanta before going into summer camp on the outskirts of the city.

The third of the band to die was Mrs. Bridget Sherlock, aged 50, wife of Pat Sherlock, who died at Dublin Thursday following a long illness. The body was brought to Atlanta Friday.

The other two members of the band who have died since the clan's last burial day are Willie O'Connell, who died last July, and Mrs. Bridget McGuire, who died August 9. Funeral services will be held at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning at the Immaculate Conception church. Burial will follow in West View cemetery.

GUARD CONFESSES THEFT FROM BANK

Catania, Sicily, April 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—The mystery surrounding the theft of eleven million lire from the local branch of the Banco di Sicilia a week ago has been cleared up by the confession of the bank's guard, Martorano.

Several days were consumed in engineering the robbery. Martorano told the police. The iron bolts and bars of the safe deposit vault were sawed, one by one, and the cracks filled with black wax to prevent detection.

Martorano informed the authorities he had five confederates, one of whom was the bank watchman, Pelligrino, while two others were mechanics who collected the tools for the robbery and did the actual work. The final touch in the removal of the vault protections was given last Sunday when the six men entered the bank at 5 o'clock in the morning and remained all day tearing apart the apertures to the strong boxes in the vault.

The men had to suspend work and hide when the bank's secretary entered to go over some correspondence, but they had the work completed by 9 o'clock Sunday night, when they collected their loot and left to deposit the stolen money in various parts of the country.

Subsequently they returned to Catania, where all six were arrested. The money has not yet been recovered.

More than 25,000,000 tons of patent fuel are made in Germany annually, against less than 2,000,000 tons in Great Britain.

G. O. P. BADLY DIVIDED ON NAVY MONEY BILL

The house, Judge Crisp pointed out that it was during the Cleveland administration that the American navy first took a prominent place on the sea. He charged those favoring a reduction below the ratio figure as being opposed to the policy of party at that time.

Why Take Chances?

"It was during the last administration's program of 1916 that the American navy became the best one in the world. Why should we take any chances or cast any vote that may reduce it to a second-class defense, Judge Crisp added.

Calling attention to the budget system, which consolidated the appropriations in one committee, the committee on appropriations, the Georgia member argued that it was expressly stated at the time that this committee was not a legislative body, which he declared it was attempting to be by not following recommendations offered in the regular channel.

He contended that inasmuch as the naval affairs committee has recommended a personnel of 86,000, the action of the appropriations committee in providing funds for a force of only 67,000 men was contrary to the purpose of the consolidation system and was an usurpation of authority. Such a policy, if continued, he said, would defeat the proper functioning of all legislative committees of the house.

HARDING PLEADS BIG NAVY IN LETTER.

Washington, April 14.—President Harding, in his first public utterance on the 1923 naval bill, declared in a letter presented today to the house that while the decision must lie with congress he would be greatly disappointed, as he believed the country would be, if the enlisted force was cut below 86,000.

The opinion was given in response to a request of the president's view by Representative Longworth, republican, Ohio, one of the leaders in the fight to defeat the proposal to limit the force to 67,000. There had been unofficial statements to the effect that the president opposed a drastic reduction in personnel and that he stood for the figure proposed in the McArthur amendment.

In presenting the letter toward the close of an all-day debate, Mr. Longworth said he was glad to accept the challenge from friends of the measure as framed to find out what the president wanted and to let the house know.

Text of Letter.

The president's letter, bearing the date of today, follows:

"My Dear Congressman Longworth: I have to acknowledge your letter of inquiry addressed to me on the tenth instant. If I were to address the congress formally I could say only what I have already said informally.

TEXACO GASOLINE THE VOLATILE GAS

(Volatility is the readiness with which gasoline gives up its power)

What happens in your motor cylinder at the instant of the spark—that's what determines how much power goes to the rear wheels and how quickly it goes there.

Texaco Gasoline, the volatile gas, will make a wonderful difference in the "pick-up" of your motor. It will take you out of traffic pinches and pull you out of emergencies that you have always had to give way to before.

Texaco Motor Oils are heavy-body lubricants and are distinguished by their clear, pale color. Light, medium, heavy and extra-heavy—they fit all cars and all conditions. You will find them wherever you see the Texaco red star.

respect to the enlisted treaty strength of Great Britain and Japan. Naval experts in the navy department, Illinois, saying they had insisted on building the Great Lakes station, which they said now was not needed. The station, he said, virtually would be wiped out of existence by the bill.

Submits Table.

Representative Rogers, republican, Massachusetts, one of the leaders in the fight for 86,000 men, and who obtained the views of Secretary Hughes, which were sent to the house early in the week, submitted today a letter from Secretary Denby with a table showing how the various forces proposed would be placed.

A fresh attack on navy estimates by Chairman Kelley, who produced a letter written by the same secretary to the president, April 4, saying he had recommended a strength of 96,000 and believed with that number "the navy can be maintained with a reasonable degree of efficiency."

"And so today the secretary has written the gentleman from Massachusetts," Mr. Kelley shouted, "that he could get along with 86,000. How can a committee act on such varying and shifting estimates from the navy department?"

"If we wait a couple of days until the secretary come down to your figure of 67,000?" asked Representative Rogers, republican, Missouri, but the chairman did not reply.

Mr. Rogers had explained that he sought reliable information from headquarters, that he had searched for data the committee failed to supply.

House Humor.

"In your search for information from the military authorities, asked Representative Connally, democrat, Texas, "did you get any from General Sawyer?"

Before the laughter subsided Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, interjected that all "the boys" knew, inasmuch as General Sawyer was in the army, not the navy.

"But he succeeded an admiral," said Representative Garrett, Tennessee, the democratic leader, and Chairman Kelley pleaded with the house to get along with the bill.

After the president's letter was read, Mr. Garrett inquired of Mr. Longworth what a poor layman could do when "we have the expert advice of Representative Norris and today Representative Mondell, the republican leader, on the other."

a basis for a report to the house on the various bids under consideration. The committee is expected to complete its preliminary examinations of Colonel W. J. Barden and Major W. H. Burns, army officers, who have been before the committee since last week, and the physical features and construction details of the Tennessee river, Alabama, power and nitrate units.

There will be no interruption of the committee's investigation into Muscle Shoals questions until they are clearly revealed to the committee members. The committee is expected to continue sessions will be held until each of the private offers, and the resolution proposing the creation of a government corporation for shoals development has been explained fully and the committee is able to visualize the effect the propositions will have upon the development of the shoals. Shells from a physical and financial standpoint, Mr. Norris said. When that has been accomplished, the committee will report to the senate.

None of the senate members was willing today to estimate when the investigation would be concluded. Senator Norris believed it would be possible to conclude the investigation and submit the committee's recommendations to the senate long before that body would be able to consider them on the floor. It was still regarded as doubtful by the senator that any real consideration would be given the proposals in the senate at this session of congress.

I was his opinion that the best way to assure certain action by the senate at the present session was to seek an amendment of the army bill, when it was reported for passage, providing an appropriation of $7,500,000 for continuance of building work on the Wilson dam by the army engineers this summer.

Houston superior court will adjourn this afternoon until Monday, April 24, when the court will convene again for the trial of criminal cases that were not disposed of this week, 22 cases being set.

Thursday the case against Lucius Mallory, negro, for murder was taken up and verdict of guilty returned and he was sentenced this morning by Judge Mathews to hang on May 26. He killed an old negro woman and robbed her of $10.

On Tuesday Henry Mickens, negro, charged with murder, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment Friday morning.

REVIVAL RECORDS BROKEN THIS YEAR

concluding sermons Sunday are expected to attract large attendance.

Grant Park Methodist.

Immense crowds were attending the services at the Grant Park Methodist church. Rev. Sam Haines, pastor, announced that 46 persons have taken professions of faith and many more by letter have been admitted to the church. Haarp Sewell, noted song leader, who has composed more than 200 original hymns, assisted by his daughter, Miss Evelyn Sewell, at the piano, is in charge of the song features.

R. P. Wiggins, pastor of the Park Street Methodist church, preached to a large congregation Friday night. Dr. Wiggins was named Friday as a delegate to the Methodist general conference, which meets in Hot Springs, Ark., May 3. He takes the place of Dr. Joseph A. Sharp, head of Emory university, who was appointed as a delegate to the conference, but who finds his duties will compel him to remain at the school.

Mount Vernon Church.

Twenty-one additions had been received by the Mount Vernon Methodist church in the city-wide evangelistic revival through Friday, it was announced Friday night by the Rev. E. C. Wilson, pastor.

Large congregations have attended the services at this church where the Rev. C. B. McDaniel, of south Georgia, has been in charge. W. W.

Hooten, widely-known song leader has been in charge of the musical program.

Special interest is being shown in the sunrise prayer service which will be held Sunday morning. "Mother's Day" services will be held at 11 o'clock and a reception will be held in honor of all new members at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The closing services of the revival will be at 7:15 in the evening.

Trinity Methodist.

"The individuality of sin is the quality that brings retribution," said Rev. Walt Holcomb in his sermon at the Trinity Methodist church Friday night. "Your sin is yours and labeled with your own private brand always and it will come home to you, too," he declared.

There is no more truthful a saying anywhere than that "Your sin will find you out," he said. "Sins are like chickens that come home to roost—like canceled checks. Did you ever look over a bunch of your canceled checks? Ever notice how they are marked and stamped and all the places they have been? Yet they come back to you just the same. And they are indefeasible proofs of just how you spent that money."

The meeting Friday night brought to a very successful close the first part of the week-night revival at the Trinity Methodist church with a number of new accessions.

Two more new accessions to the church were made at the revival services at the Harris Street Presbyterian church Friday night, where Rev. B. Frank White, in conducting the revival, assisted by Rev. Roy T. Brumbaugh, pastor. This brings the total number of accessions during the revival to 25 for this church.

Dr. White's sermon Friday night dealt with excuses. "Some men I have met in Atlanta are always full of excuses why they do not become Christians. These are always the most flimsy inventions of which the human mind is capable."

Saturday night Dr. White's subject will be "Show Your Ticket—Or Held Up at the Gate." This will be the only revival service in the city and a large crowd is expected. On Sunday afternoon there will be a special meeting for men.

WILSON REPUDIATES TUMULTUOUS MESSAGE

The Wilson letter to The Times, there is widespread opinion at the capital among democrats that the former president clearly had these facts in mind when, without being solicited, he repudiated the message.

Mr. Wilson, it is said, is for the success of the party, and is not blind to the nationwide reaction which has so manifested itself in primaries throughout the United States in recent weeks; and he is not willing to sacrifice the chance for victory by demanding that the league be made the chief issue at this time. He is firm in the belief that the spirit of the Versailles instrument will eventually be accepted and entered into by the American people, and that the republicans themselves have relinquished their opposition by ratifying the four-power pact, but he is determined that the public alone shall realize its mistake in first rejecting the league and then accepting it, rather than by antagonizing them through continual reminders to that effect.

The chain of successes in recent congressional and state and municipal primaries tend strongly to the restoration of the minority party to the control of the house, the 68th congress and to a change of the political map of the country.

Democrats Confident.

Democratic leaders see this and are manifesting a degree of confidence not seen since their national ticket was buried beneath an unprecedented avalanche of votes in 1920. They are convinced that they stand in a fair way to at least materially reduce the majority of the lower house, with not a bad outlook for two years hence.

The situation in Missouri points to that state returning to the democratic column this fall. Kansas City is looked upon as a barometer of the political atmosphere in that state, and only recently the democratic ticket ran about five times ahead of its normal majority in municipal elections. Senator Reed and the republican governor of the state both participated personally in the campaign for the purpose of offsetting each other's influence. The democratic candidates received a majority of some 15,000 votes, whereas their normal majority is about 2,000.

Connecticut Victories.

Up in Connecticut the last of the important cities in the state to vote, has just turned out a republican majority and elected a democrat by 300 majority. Only a few days before the other cities of the state voted, and in every instance the republican candidate were defeated.

Those included Hartford, the foremost city in the state, and normally a republican stronghold.

What non-partisan observers record as the most significant campaign that has taken place since the New Mexico balloting, ended in the election of Lewis Henry, republican, to succeed Alanson B. Houghton from the thirty-seventh New York district by a plurality of approximately 3,800. This district is normally republican by from 15,000 to 18,000. Nobody here recalls when it was represented by a democrat. Mr. Houghton carried it by 30,000 in 1920. In Tuesday's election the republican majority was cut to 3,051, or about one-fifth of the republican majorities of the past.

It is accounted for by those immediately familiar with the district by the fact that business is bad and unemployment more or less general in that part of New York state. Although the liquor issue played some part in the New York election, and perhaps some part in the primary contests in the eleventh and sixteenth Illinois districts, where Representatives Copley and Ireland have been defeated, it is more likely that economic conditions are responsible in larger measure for democratic gains of recent months.

COTTON SEED MEN RAP TARIFF BODY

Washington, April 14.—An announcement given out today at the offices here of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' association said that representatives of this organization from all states, at a meeting in Washington, had joined in declaring that the duties advocated on exportable commodities of the south by the Southern Tariff association were "grossly unsound and if adopted by congress would be empty impotent tariff rates by which none of the cotton growers or cotton seed oil mills would profit."

"The dairy interests who are seeking to lead southern cotton growers into a tariff trap through the agency of the Southern Tariff association," said a formal statement by President Grogan, of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association, "have joined the ranks of others seeking to exploit the American public, especially along the Canadian border, as these dairy interests have had exorbitant rates of duty on milk, cream and butter written into the Fordney-McCumber bill, which will make the tax on Canadian dairy products so high that the prices of American milk, cream and butter will be artificially raised."

"On exportable commodities," continued Mr. Grogan, "our first concern should be to protect our export markets, and being short of power by tariffs to bid for or purchase competing surpluses of other producing countries we have no voice in international price making and must sell our entire crop at international price levels dictated entirely by Europe."

"We have had this very disastrous experience under the emergency tariff which we can not blame congress for, but now that we have experienced the futility of tariffs on exportable commodities and their depressing effect on the international price scale it is a very serious matter to be confronted with the misguided efforts of some farm groups to perpetuate this economic blunder in our permanent tariff."

INSPECT EXPERIMENT STATION AT GRIFFIN

Griffin, Ga., April 14.—(Special.) Governor and Mrs. Thomas W. Hardwick were honor guests at the regular quarterly meeting of the members of the board of directors of the Georgia experiment station today.

The members spent two days in inspecting and looking over the work now being done at the station.

James J. Elmt entertained the members of the board and Governor and Mrs. Hardwick at a large barbecue yesterday.

FULLER PREDICTS BETTER BUSINESS

Alfred C. Fuller, president of the Fuller Brush company, of Hartford, Conn., and one of the widest known men of his field in the country, arrived in Atlanta Friday to attend a convention of sales representatives of his product in the southeastern district. Approximately 75 sales representatives from all parts of the south are here.

In a talk Friday afternoon at the opening session Mr. Fuller expressed gratification at the present business prospects in the south and predicted that conditions in all lines of trade would shortly enter upon an era of prosperity.

"Our southern division," he asserted, "is the latest branch of the organization but I am happy to report that sales in this section compare favorably with records made in the eastern and New England states, where our product was first distributed."

"Building Men" was the subject of Mr. Fuller's informal talk to sales representatives at a banquet in the main dining room of the Hotel Ansley Friday night. Jerome C. Ard, district sales manager, of Savannah, presided. Mr. Fuller with an address of welcome to the representatives. Others delivering short talks were H. M. Ables, sales manager for the southern division; Wallace E. Campbell, secretary to the president; O. S. Elliott, of Greenville, S. C.; W. G. Mathis, of J. E. Hamman and A. A. Watkins, of Atlanta.

COLORED SCHOOL BODY TO MEET SOON IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—The Georgia Association for the Advancement of Education Among Negroes will hold its next annual meeting at Columbus, April 19-22. This organization, composed of the educational, religious and fraternal bodies and forward looking men and women throughout the state, has succeeded in arousing great interest among colored people on the subject of school improvement.

The organization employs a field secretary who travels over the state in the interest of better schools for negroes. Among the outstanding accomplishments during the past year have been the assistance given in the building of Rosenwald school houses, valued at approximately $60,000, in various sections of the state, and the observance of Better Public Schools day, March 10. On this occasion exercises were held in churches and schools throughout the state in the interest of better public schools for negro youth.

The organization also works in close co-operation with the state and local school officials in their efforts to improve the public schools for negroes, especially in the small towns and country districts.

The principal address of the Columbus meeting will be delivered by Dr. Moton, principal of Tuskegee insti-

Tech Marionettes Present 'Under Cover' Here Today

Lewis Pitts and Robert Dunwoody as Mr. and Mrs. Michael Harrington.

The Tech Marionettes held the final rehearsal last night for the presentation of "Under Cover," at the Atlanta theater today.

Everything is in readiness for the performances this afternoon and tonight and Atlanta is assured of seeing the best college dramatic club in the south.

The play is a four-act melodrama filled with moments of excitement and humor. From beginning to end the audience is held in suspense and wonders what is to happen next.

The costumes are the most elaborate ever used by a southern dramatic club. There are five boys playing feminine roles, characters ranging from the "nice old lady" down to the Parisian chorus girl.

It promises to be a treat.

The entire cast for "Under Cover" is as follows:

Ethel Cartwright, Harry Ellerbe; Steven Denby, Joe Duckworth; Daniel Taylor, Russell Stokes; Monty Vaughn, Charlie Northen; Michael Harrington, Lewis Pitts; Alice Harrington, Robert Dunwoody; Nora Rutledge, Red Richardson; Sarah Peabody, Marshall Moore; Amy Cartwright, Nisbet Mayre; Harry Gibbs, William Parsons; James Duncan, Bill Reid; Peter, James Whitfield; Lambert, George Rosser; understudy and prompter, Hugh Saussy.

vided by the local committee will be music by a chorus of a hundred voices and luncheon at Fort Benning under the direction of Sergeants Simmons and Blue and their associates.

Mother Thought Her Daughter Was Eloping, But She Was Mistaken

Savannah, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—All because a published description of her made her seem just like another girl, Miss Freida Currie, of Miami, Fla., better known in film circles as an actress, Freda Deleine, 17 and pretty, was arrested here and has been held at police barracks for twenty hours, smiling through the situation and taking it as an unavoidable "comedy of errors" which would untangle itself as all good comedy situations should.

Some days ago, Miss Sybil Sauls, of Miami with W. A. Saxon here in a big touring car of Saxon's, was detained, Saxon being charged with enticing the girl from her home. Saxon was said to be a married man. The description of the Sauls girl reached Miami. Miss Currie's mother knew her daughter was in Savannah, she was sure the description was that of her and by wire requested that she be found and returned to her in Miami.

A Miami officer arrived today to take Saxon and Miss Sauls back, and until after the telephone and telegraph wires had been kept hot for hours, it appeared he would have the motion picture actress on his hands, too. Miss Currie is here hunting "locations" for "The Flamingo," A. T. T. Griffith's picture in which she will have the leading role. She appeared in "Adam and Eva," "Destiny's Isle" and other pictures.

Anti-Jazz Meeting To Be Held by Council In Savannah Monday

Savannah, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—Savannah's mayor and council ordinarily hold their meetings at which all the important business is agreed upon in executive session. Monday afternoon, however, there will be an open meeting to which the public is invited. The matter of the proposed Garfunkel anti-jazz music and dancing ordinance will be discussed. City-wide interest has been stirred by the introduction of first reading in council of the ordinance which would prohibit at any and all public dances in the city jazz dancing and jazz music and would seek to place restrictions upon public dances by requiring same chaperonage.

Inoffensive Negro Killed by Veteran; His Nerves Blamed

Columbus, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—Charlie Adams, 70-year-old negro, was shot and instantly killed early this morning by Elmer Dimon, 23, white, while the former was at work in a flower garden on Tenth avenue. Three shots were fired, two taking effect.

No reason has been assigned for the shooting by Dimon, a former service man. Relatives stated that his nervous system has been impaired for several months, and the police and others were of the opinion that this condition was responsible for the shooting.

Dimon was arrested and placed in the city jail.

Presbytery Adjourns.

Tifton, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—The spring session of the Savannah presbytery adjourned last night to meet with the First Presbyterian church in Savannah, on the afternoon of May 1, when unfinished business of the Tifton meeting will be taken up. Adjournment came earlier than was expected because Moderator L. R. Scott was called to Valdosta on account of the illness of his wife.

Rev. J. S. Shibley, of Waycross, presided at the closing session. Rev. Fritz Rauschenberg was elected superintendent of evangelism for the presbytery. A car was purchased for him today and he will give his entire time to home mission work. A memorial by Dr. Anderson requesting that the basis for membership for Y. W. C. A. be not changed, but that it remain necessary for a woman to be a member of a church to belong to the association was adopted.

Heavy Sentences Given Violators Of "Dry" Laws

Moultrie, Ga., April 14.—(Special.) Judge W. E. Thomas, of the southern circuit, this afternoon imposed a fine of $1,000 on J. T. Hammock, convicted of violating the prohibition law, and gave him a suspended sentence of twelve months on the charge of giving liquor to the chafang, gang and six months in jail. It was the most severe penalty ever given a liquor law violator in the local court.

Hammock, who operated a thousand-acre farm, was alleged to have been in partnership with four white tenants on his place in liquor operations on a large scale. The tenants also were convicted. They were given fines of $100 each, or thirty days in jail and also drew suspended sentences of one year each on the chafang.

In sentencing Hammock, Judge Thomas told him that he was the chief offender and was entitled to little consideration.

"The evidence discloses," Judge

Thomas said, "that you took advantage of the poverty and distress of the men who worked on your thousand-acre farm and induced them to make the whisky, run the direct risk, while you sat, as you thought, in the background with no danger of being caught, and got half of the whisky the men made."

One of the tenants on the Hammock farm, following his conviction, swore against his employer, declaring that Hammock furnished the ingredients needed in the manufacture of the whisky and then took half of the finished product.

Ten other violators of the liquor law, all of them poor men, with large families, also were sentenced this afternoon. It was their first offense and the defendants were fined $100 each and given suspended sentences of twelve months on the chafang.

A "SEVEN-POINTS" CENTER.
Materialization of the splendid plan for the extension of Madison avenue to Whitehall street, as suggested by the city planning commission and urged by owners of abutting property, which plan has been approved in tentative form by the streets committee of council, would give Atlanta its first "Seven Points."

From Peters street south Madison avenue is little more than an alley, wholly inadequate for use as a traffic thoroughfare.

The plan now before council is to widen it to eighty feet over that distance, making Madison a standard thoroughfare extending from the southern end of the proposed Spring street viaduct to Whitehall, thus providing an additional north-south artery of traffic.

Madison would then join Forsyth near its junction with Whitehall, and at the point where Cooper, Forsyth, Windsor, Fair and Brotherton streets meet Whitehall; the traffic center thus created forming Atlanta's first "Seven Points," which would become a most important center as it is only a few blocks from the center of the city.

The extension of Madison, together with the completion of the Spring street viaduct project opening Spring street from Madison to Brookwood station, would provide another route, paralleling Whitehall, Broad and Forsyth and Washington streets, for traffic between the northern and southern sections of the city.

This would be a great relief to the constantly increasing traffic congestion of the city and in every way it would prove greatly beneficial to the community.

The preliminary action that has been taken toward this development has been commendable in every respect, and it is to be hoped that council and the county commissioners will closely co-operate to the completion of this most important undertaking.

THOSE ARBUCKLE FILMS.
Announcement that the acquittal of "Fatty" Arbuckle of the charge of manslaughter is to be followed "at once" by the release of three films posed by the bulky comedian shortly before his arrest several months ago is not likely to call forth any very general outburst of enthusiasm on the part of the public.

The producers express confidence, they say in their announcement, "that the American public realizes by this time that Arbuckle has been the victim of unfortunate circumstances," which it does, undoubtedly—the "unfortunate circumstances" being that a drunken "gin jollification" party staged by Arbuckle in his hotel apartments culminated in the death of one of the revelers.

Arbuckle was arrested and thrice tried on the charge of manslaughter, and what the jury finally did was to legally absolve him from that charge.

But there is another charge hanging over Arbuckle—and over every other participant in that fatal debauch—from which he has not been absolved, and that is the charge of indecency.

It is a charge brought by public sentiment, supported by all of the evidence adduced at the three manslaughter trials; and it can be absolved only by public sentiment.

The erstwhile defendant may have been unjustly accused of taking human life; but by the uncontroverted evidence he is guilty of grossly lascivious behavior.

It is true, perhaps, as represented by the producer, that the three films in question "represent a large investment and involve great potential profits;" but that is neither here nor there so far as the public welfare is concerned, or from the standpoint of moral decency or of the dignity and self-respect of the great motion picture industry.

EFFECTIVE BOOSTERS.

In many ways and upon every appropriate occasion members of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs have demonstrated their civic pride and enterprising spirit, but never have they done this to greater advantage or in a more practical way than in sponsoring and promoting the current campaign to stimulate consumption, by Georgians, of Georgia products.

Not only are the club women of this state "putting Georgia on the map" by their "home products-boosting" activities, but they are teaching Georgian lessons in self-dependence and how to "live at home"—a lesson which will be of value to future generations.

In a figurative sense they are teaching the lesson of how to "make two blades grow where one grew before."

There is no logical reason why a pound of meat, or of dairy products, or of food products, should be shipped into Georgia from other states for consumption by Georgians; and yet each year our importations of such commodities run high into the millions of dollars, every dollar representing money that should be kept at home and applied to the development of our own resources and industries.

Commending the club women for what they are doing to stop this needless drain upon the state and to make Georgia self-supporting, the Albany Herald truthfully said in an editorial recently, that—

"In few things has the federation been more persistently active than in seeking to impress upon Georgians the fact that a state producing such splendid food products as Georgia should be ashamed not to give them preference—not to utilize them the year round, thereby materially strengthening the home market for home products."

In a similar vein, complimenting the club women—particularly Mrs. J. E. Hays, their president—the Dalton Citizen pointedly declared in an editorial the other day that—

"Everything that is needed for a wholesome existence, and many things used only in emergencies are made in Georgia, and if the people as a whole could be brought to realize it and shown the enormous amount of money their trading at home would keep in the state to be used to increase production and the building up of every section, it would be a big step forward indeed."

"We need nothing more than to be impressed with the good qualities of the things we have. When we realize that we have succeeded in producing standard products, and use them, then will others believe in our achievements and seek to satisfy their needs in our markets."

In striving to impress upon Georgians a full realization and appreciation of the true greatness and the possibilities of their state, the Federation of Women's Clubs is rendering a service that puts its members in the foremost ranks of Georgia boosters.

The federation merits the wholehearted support and co-operation of every other organization and of every citizen of this great, rich, though under-developed, commonwealth.

Defending a California clergyman's championship of courting in church, the Tampa Tribune says—"If they would 'fess up, quite a number of old-timers hereabouts, as elsewhere, would acknowledge that their marital happiness dates back to the time when they took 'her' home from meetin', starting at the church door—and what better starting place could there be?"

In the fish-story season the weather naturally suggests the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone.

Those western newspaper men "invited to a Will Hays dinner at $6 a plate," must have dreamed they were rich.

Of course Mrs. Asquith was "pleased with the United States." They all say the same—when the box receipts stack up.

President Harding shakes up a bureau apparently as mad as a man who has lost his collar button under it.

Also, lawmower exercise is a remedy for spring fever, but the objection to it is that it wakes the neighbors too early in the morning.

Why the Hills Call.
(A Billville Interpretation.)
Of course, the hills are calling. But the hills, it hardly thrills. For the poets know the farmers Are tearin' up the hills; And by that sign they understand They're needin' nary an extra hand.

And little know the poets Of how to sow and reap—When birds in shady covert Are singin' them to sleep; And hence, in vain the fair hills call: The farmers can't surround 'em all!

LOOSEN UP!
I have noticed that there is in certain humors of free a lack of relaxation, and that from them you get the impression of a mind and body that is tied—that continually frets under something.

You talk with them, and they often bark at you instead of easily exchanging views and entering into helpful conversation.

What 90 per cent of the people in this world need more than anything else is to relax—to loosen up!

Willie Jones, in one of his delightful essays speaks of "that blessed internal peace and confidence—that wells up from every part of the body of a successfully well-trained human being, and soaks the indwelling soul of him with satisfaction—an element of spiritual hygiene of supreme significance."

A Scottish doctor once expressed this as his leading impression of Americans: "You Americans wear too much expression on your faces. You are living like an army with all its reserves engaged in action."

Walk down the streets of any great city and study the faces of those you pass. I am not sure but the noted doctor set forth much truth.

It is not necessary to appear busy in order actually to be extremely busy and accomplishing a full program. Those who complete the most work are usually those who do it with the most ease and by way of the simplest plan.

J. M. FLOYD DIES IN REDAN THURSDAY
Redan, Ga., April 13.—(Special.)—J. M. Floyd, aged 45, died Thursday morning at the residence following an illness of several months.

Mr. Floyd was a member of Lithonia lodge, F. & A. M., and was a Knight Templar and Shriner.

He recently returned from a trip to Hot Springs, where, accompanied by his physician, Dr. R. D. Pounds, he went in an effort to regain his health.

Funeral services will be held at the Redan Baptist church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Masons will be in charge. Rev. J. B. Gresham and W. B. Twigg will officiate.

Surviving him are his widow and three children, Martha, Elsie and Dorothy; two sisters, Mrs. L. A. Johnson and Mrs. W. F. Evans, and a son, J. M. Floyd, Jr.

Georgia College for Women Lauded by New York Educator

Editor Constitution: I have just visited the Georgia Normal and Industrial college for women and as one interested in the higher education of women, particularly in ways that equip her to take her part in modern life, I cannot but be impressed by what your state is accomplishing in this institution. Here is an institution which at small cost to the state, is providing a modern academic or general cultural training with preparation for a specific vocation, teaching the home-making, and which is increasing our store of traditional culture by developing the cultural aspects of the day's tasks on the farm, in the home and in the care of the child.

In 1910, an American woman writing of the education of women pointed out that woman's natural vocations were as teacher of children in the school, as guardian of the health of child and adult, and as mother, housekeeper and homemaker. All vocational doors have since been opened to her, and the three fields suggested and to varied related vocations.

Milledgeville is a college for women that has developed, in addition to fundamental college instruction, specialized training for the vocational fields of the home, the school and the community. It is one of the first institutions in the country to offer higher instruction in home-making for women.

It has influenced other colleges. Today, with 1,100 young women in attendance from every part of the state, hundreds of others have had to be refused for lack of dormitory and other accommodations. No state can afford to refuse to provide higher education to its children who request it.

In a similar state college for women in a nearby state I found the other day 1,000 women on the campus and room to be made for 300 more next year by the building of new dormitories and dining halls provided by a generous state appropriation that in two or three years will still further increase the accommodations to 2,000.

At Milledgeville there is a small addition to a dormitory being constructed out of the savings in costs of operation by an efficient college management. The time must be nearly at hand, with the resumption of normal business conditions, when Georgia will make an adequate business investment in the higher education of its women.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT.
At the last grand free distribution of the keep well exercise which I modestly designate as the Brady symphony, a veritable army wrote in for copies. I wonder how many of them are still playing the symphony on the old metabolism? A considerable number of those who wanted copies asked for the "revised" symphony. The revised score hasn't been published. I have merely added two new movements, No. 13, which I described in the last talk on the subject, and No. 14, which I shall describe now. There are still a number of copies of the better metabolism symphony on hand, and a copy will be mailed to any reader who needs to be coaxed to indulge in a reasonable amount of exercise every morning or evening, provided a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed with the request and no other subject is discussed in the letter to Dr. Brady, care of this newspaper.

The fourteenth movement is taken in the same posture as that of No. 12, that is, supine, with the hands on the floor, beneath the hips. Without lifting head or shoulders from the floor, breathe in and at the same time lift both legs up to the vertical, but do not stop there; keep the legs moving straight over and flex at hips and knees as tightly as you can, so that the thighs press down upon the belly, then immediately straighten the legs up to vertical again, at the same time breathing out, and return the legs to the starting position.

Men should repeat this movement from 3 to 20 times each session, though it requires several weeks' practice to do it more than 10 times without undue fatigue or lameness. Women should repeat the movement from 3 to 10 times each session, as they become accustomed.

The rendition of the symphony should be begun by rolling about half a dozen somersaults on a suitable mat, forward, and if you are still young backward. The performance should be concluded by a similar rolling. I believe the somersaults take out any kinks or cranks one may develop from the exercises, particularly a beginner. A padded mat or cushion two feet wide and six feet long is ideal for somersaulting. Somewhere in Iowa, though I can't recall where, such a cushion is made for this very purpose. A few pillows or a few rugs may be used as a cushion. Of course, when one has rolled his first thousand somersaults he requires no cushion, just the floor.

An artistic rendition of the complete, revised symphony requires more than less than 20 minutes. I again urge upon the sedentary man or woman the value of an air bath while playing the symphony—that is, I am sure more benefit is derived from these exercises if one takes them without clothing, and in a room with wide open windows admitting the coolest air the season or climate affords.

Far be it from me to intimate that any particular group of exercises is superior to other varied setting up exercises. The ones I have included in the symphony are merely designed to suit the needs of the greatest number of sedentary men and women.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Reading at Night.
Do you think reading for a few hours every night will injure my eyesight or my health? For about a year my eyes have been red and in the morning a sticky, hard substance is on the edges of the lids. Is that granulated lids? I do not wear glasses. At night my eyes don't hurt, only there is a dry feeling.—(A. H.)

Answer—Such low-grade inflammation of the edges of the eyelids often accompanies a defect of vision, which calls for glasses. It might be well to have glasses for your night reading at any rate. Night reading is generally all right if the light is properly arranged so that a clear light falls on the page yet the source of light is not within your field of vision in the morning. Avoid red, green or other colored lights, and use white or nearly white light only.

XII. "Carry On."
"A magazine writer explains the vivid picture that lies behind the phrase, 'Carry On.'"

"The order is given to the men in the trenches to go 'over the top.' The lieutenant of each platoon leads his men in the attack. In many cases—for this is a 'lieutenant's war'—the officer is the first to fall.

"When he is disabled, he calls to the sergeant, 'Carry On,' and the sergeant steps into the place of command. If the sergeant is incapacitated, he passes on to the corporal the word, 'Carry On,' and the corporal becomes the leader.

"The corporal is struck down, and the summons comes to a private, 'Carry On.'"

"That is the way in which battles are fought and victories are won. Each man does his part; and when one drops, another steps into his place. Workers! This is a slogan for Christian workers."

We are blessed with a host of young men in our nation who are so brave and gallant that we have come to regard it as a matter of course that there should never be a hero lacking when the call comes to "Carry On." We have not been disappointed in them, either.

But God has us who are His followers in a war far more trying than any earthly war.

He, too, needs soldiers who will, in His cause of saving souls from sin, "Carry On."

Can He count on us, as we did on our gallant boys, as a matter of course, that we will "Carry On"? Haven't we played the coward and failed to speak to someone to whom He has drawn our thoughts?

If so, we have failed Him when He called us to "Carry On." Does a world war veteran read these words? Will he permit a question? Are you, we feel, an brave for God as you were for your cause? Do you respond as bravely to Him as you did to the call "over there" of "Carry On?"

God needs you in this revival campaign; will you "Carry On?"

FLOOD EMERGENCY FOR NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, April 14.—With the crest of the Mississippi within a few inches of the top of the levees here and a forecast by the weather bureau indicating that an additional rise of 1.5 feet is probable before the end of the month, every flood protective agency in the city was reported on the alert today to cope with any emergency.

Government engineers in charge of the levees, officials of the dock board and experienced rivermen are unanimous in declaring that there is no danger whatever threatening in the lower reaches of the river. Especially is this true, they say, in regard to the location of New Orleans, where the levees gradually slope back for hundreds of feet. While it may be necessary to raise the embankments to prevent water from washing over the top, this is a contingency the river engineers calculated on, they say. Work of raising the lower levees has already begun, and will be continued to meet changing conditions.

TO STORE FUEL OIL OF NAVY ABOVE GROUND

Washington, April 14.—A new policy in handling reserves of fuel oil for the navy, involving abandonment of attempts to keep the oil in storage under ground was announced today by the interior department. The project was worked out in co-operation with the navy department, the statement said, and involves the permanent storage above ground of "royalty oils" derived from naval oil reserve lands in California and Wyoming, storage to be made by operation at points on both coasts suitable for quick supply of the fleets in emergencies.

"Contracts have been made and are now being made," the statement said, "which will insure the navy ample storage for all the fuel oil which it has obtained now and which it will hereafter obtain from such reserves. This storage will be located at such points that in any time of crisis or need the ships of the United States may obtain the same at points from Guantanamo, Cuba, to the extreme northeast of Maine and from California to Hawaii."

Solves Controversies

The new policy is outgrowth of the effort to solve controversies growing out of the setting aside of certain lands for naval purposes which congress passed the way the land leasing act. The interior department pointed out that under the previous practice of storing oil in naval lands was being drained away by adjacent private operations and the so-called "royalty reserves" would be exhausted within a few years.

Under the new leasing and "royalty oil" storage plans, the department's statement said, the oil would be prevented and the navy be assured of an immediate available war reserve supply of oil fuel for all times.

The interior department's statement follows:

"The theory upon which these naval reserves were created was that supplies of oil should thus be ensured for the use of the navy as fuel."

"On each of these reserves private claims had been filed or presented in one form or another, some of which were approved by the supreme court of the United States, others by departmental action and others pending without either judicial or departmental action."

"Under the law the interior department was to adjudicate claims of individuals, the navy to have for its purposes any royalty oil derived from such claims, as well as to have the title to any royalty oil produced from the lands under such claims."

"It became evident that the theory of maintaining a reserve of oil under the ground where other drillings by private individuals entitled so to drill was being carried out not tenaciously. It became apparent that to carry out this theory of fuel oil reserves for naval purposes, the oil must either be extracted and stored where it would not be lost by evaporation or that other bodies entitled to drilling would receive the benefits directly of the oil under their own lands and would from day to day exhaust the oil under the navy holdings so that within a few years in any event the so-called naval reserve would be exhausted and the navy thus lose all benefit therefrom while a few individual claimants would receive benefits to which they were not entitled. After thorough and full examination and consideration by the best experts whose opinion we could obtain, it became apparent that we must secure storage for such naval oils above ground or at least in containers of some character."

"It is a fact well established that fuel oil in proper containers loses less than 1 per cent in ten years by evaporation or other loss."

"In handling each of these reserves for the interior department, as well as for the navy, the foregoing facts have been borne in mind and contracts have been and are being made which will insure the navy ample storage for all of the fuel oil which it has obtained now and which it will hereafter obtain from such reserves. This storage will be located at such points that in any time of crisis or need the ships of the United States can obtain the same at points from Guantanamo, Cuba, to the extreme northeast of Maine, and from California to Hawaii."

"This policy of dealing with naval oil is entirely different from the governmental policy of dealing with oil on the public lands where the proceeds must be sold for the highest obtainable price and divided, as provided by the act of congress, between the United States treasury, the reclamation service and the state in which such deposits are located."

"It must be understood that congress recognized this difference and by law provided for obtaining fuel oil for naval purposes by the exchange of the crude product as it came out of the wells which the navy itself could not use for such purposes, not for any other purpose, until after it had gone through the refining process. Therefore, in working out the storage problems we are providing storage and the delivery of the naval oil at the place where it will be easily accessible, and still not subject to loss by the exchange of crude oils with refiners and others for such naval oils so delivered in the proper character of storage."

"The contemplated campaign for $25,000 for the American Red Cross Workers will be conducted during the week of May 22, according to announcement Friday following a meeting of the executive board Friday in the Chandler building."

Cossack Ataman Still Languishes In N. Y. Bastile

While Thousands Wait Opportunity to "Hiss" and "Boo" Former War Chief.

New York, April 14.—General Gregor Semenov, ataman of the Cossacks, was still in Ludlow street jail tonight, waiting for $25,000 bail. Outraged, crowding the street, perched on railings, leaning from windows, even sitting on edges of roofs, were thousands who waited for him, not to cheer but to "hiss" and "boo" the leader of the Cossacks.

Most of the thousands who milled about the jail during the day knew the Cossack. Most of them were men and women of Russian descent who live in the thickly settled districts of the lower East Side. If they did not know themselves what the hard-drinking Cossacks do, they had been told by their fathers or mothers who had fled from Russian massacres and they had no love for Semenov.

Early in the day police reserves were called out. They milled with the crowd, ready to avert any possible trouble or to open a passageway through the crowds when callers came from the jail. Once or twice the reserves went into the tenements nearby and drove the people from the roofs.

Push Toward Jail.

When the police reserves with their unmistakable mustaches, which flow over his broad cheeks to points under his eyes, was taken out for exercise in the jail, he was surrounded by a crowd of about 100 police officers. There was a concerted push toward the jail doors, but the crowd could make no impression on the old red brick walls.

Colonel Kromsky, a former czarist officer, went to visit Semenov, his chief. He was hissed and booed as the police made a wide lane for him by main force. The colonel would not talk. He hurried inside, conferred with the general and hurried out and away.

Madame Semenov, the smiling young woman who has stood behind her husband for more than a week of trouble mounting upon trouble, did not visit the jail. She contented herself with going to church and sitting in her hotel waiting for news of a bail bond.

All Efforts Fail.

During the day the general's attorney was busy seeking to get the $25,000 bond, but company after company refused on "patriotic" grounds. An effort to have Semenov released through a legal vacancy of his arrest failed—and the crowd milled on.

A new effort to release the Cossack will be made tomorrow. It will be through a vacancy of his arrest. If it fails, there is nothing the attorneys can do, they say, but wait until the end of the hearing in which the Yovurtse Home for Foreigners is seeking to get information on Semenov's property.

The general wants to sail for Europe next week, but his attorneys today said he probably wouldn't.

Names Are Given Of First Four Men Who Died in War

Names of the first four members of the American expeditionary forces to lose their lives in the world war were contained in an official communication from Robert C. Davis, acting adjutant general of the United States army, to Charles Anton Moran, of the veterans' hospital, on Peachtree road, and read before members of Greater Atlanta Post No. 390, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at its regular meeting Friday night.

Names of the American heroes are as follows: Lieutenant William T. Fitzsimmons, Kansas City; Private Rudolph Rubine, New York city; Oscar C. Lugo, Boston, and Leslie G. Woods, Streator, Ill. All four of these men were killed outright when base hospital No. 5, located at Dannes-Carniers, France, was bombed by a German airplane September 4, 1917.

Announcement was made that a bureau which will handle claims of former service men and aid them in obtaining trading medals and other honors was now being maintained at an early date by the post. J. T. Ellenberg, assisted by six members of the post, will be in charge of the bureau. It will have as its object the handling of municipal and state matters, will be organized within the next few days.

R. V. Burgen, vice commander, presided at the meeting Friday, in the absence of Commander Otto Mitchell, who was reported ill.

Requests from nearest relatives for the return of American dead from overseas are now not favorably considered by the war department.

1,500 ARE HOMELESS IN NORFOLK BLAZE

Norfolk, Va., April 14.—With the break of day Norfolk was planning the relief of 1,500 or more negroes rendered homeless by the fire in Berkeley, a suburb, last night, which wiped out approximately 300 homes. City officials today estimated the total property loss at $750,000.

A large canteen tent was being erected to be operated by the department of public welfare, tents from the navy yard were set up in the St. Helena reservation to give shelter to men of the negro colony, and the women were taken care of at the homes of Berkeley and Norfolk negroes.

The city, with the aid of the Red Cross, the negro ministerial association and other local agencies, will be able to handle the situation, according to officials.

A guard comprising police, sailors and marines was to be thrown around the St. Helena reservation.

Two sailors were arrested by marines charged with attempting to loot household effects in the streets.

There was considerable confusion among the fire victims as darkness fell. Lights in the threatened districts were cut off and a considerable force of sailors, marines and police had to be provided to prevent disorder. Companies of sailors and marines were used as guards and also in fighting the flames and tearing down houses in the path of the blaze.

Reports to the police indicated that matches or cigarettes, thrown by youngsters who were playing a ball game near the Tunis Lumber company's mill was responsible for the start of the blaze.

Four navy yard tugs were engaged in fighting the fire which covered nearly eight blocks of homes and small business houses.

In addition to living tents and kitchens, the establishment of a hospital tent with naval medical surgeon and attendants was being arranged, and by nightfall it was said the reservation would be ready to house and care for the many needy families.

There are 222 grand officers of the Legion of Honor of France. The government, according to law, authorizes only five such officers.

Georgia Avenue School Center Sets Record in Baby Week Work

LAST BABY CENTER. Saturday, 10 a. m. Church of the Epiphany, Moreland avenue and McLendon streets.

The Georgia Avenue school established a record for baby attendance Friday afternoon when this center held its first baby clinic during the week. At the hour of opening, 2 o'clock, approximately 100 mothers and babies were waiting in the halls and school rooms for the appearance of nurses and doctors to make examination and offer advice. Mrs. Holmes Chaney, J. J. Martin and Charles M. Mashburn were examining physicians, assisted by nurses from the city board of health.

Sixty-seven youngsters visited the center at the Church of the Epiphany in Inman Park Friday morning. This center has attracted widespread attention because of the splendid work accomplished along the line of child welfare by the Moreland Avenue Parent-Teacher association, of which Mrs. Norvatus L. Barker is president. The doors of the church will open Saturday morning at 8 o'clock, and mothers in that section may bring their babies to be examined by Dr. Norvatus L. Barker.

The operation of this center concludes the intensive program for baby week inaugurated by the Atlanta Woman's club with the co-operation of the state board of health, the city board of health and the Anti-Tuberculosis association. Wide interest has been aroused in every section of the city in this subject, and plans are already under way to make baby week an annual event in Atlanta. Permanent centers for examination of babies will be operated in a number of localities during the entire year. The baby week posters made by the school children of Atlanta under supervision of Miss Charlotte G. Smith, art supervisor for public schools, are on exhibition in the windows of the Goodhart-Tompkins company.

Leaders in the baby week movement, Mrs. B. M. Boykin, Mrs. E. E. Goodhart and Mrs. Charles Goodman, expressed themselves as highly pleased over the interest shown in baby week, the number of babies examined and the high physical average of Atlanta's babies.

NEGRO CADDY DIES TRYING TO RESCUE DROWNING YOUTH

Two unidentified negro caddies were drowned Friday afternoon in the lake at Brookhaven, the country club of the Capital City club, when one caddy attempted to rescue another after he had gone down for the second time.

The younger negro had dived in the water looking for golf balls when his head struck some hard object, causing his nose to bleed. When his companion attempted to rescue him the drowning boy grabbed him around the neck and both were drowned.

Coroner Paul Donehoo investigated but decided to hold no inquest as there were eye-witnesses to the drowning.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING WILL REOPEN TODAY

Washington, April 14.—The bureau of engraving and printing will resume operations tomorrow, it was said tonight at the treasury. The plant was closed Sunday by Secretary Mellon for an inventory of its stock valued at millions of dollars following the removal of James L. Wilmett as director, and other high officials by executive order of President Harding.

Mechanical work of the inventory, such as counting the stock of paper and plates, has been completed by the inventory committee, officials said, but it will probably be a week before the checking up of the count is finished and a report prepared.

NAMES OF MEN TURN INTO WORDS

Activities of Great Personages Give Language More Idea Conveyers.

The study of language shows how the names of men often become a part of common speech. For instance, our word "dunce" comes from Duns Scotus, one of the most illustrious teachers of the Franciscan order. His time theological controversy waged loud and fierce. His opponents, on hearing an argument from one of his school, would say contemptuously, "Oh, you are a Duns man" or more briefly, "You are a Dun." Finally the word came to mean a dull, ignorant person—and to be spelled "dunce." We get "alottery," the alcoholoid derived from tobacco, from Nicot, a famous French physician, who introduced the tobacco plant into Europe.

It is not the province of a dictionary to go into the origin and history of words, but The New Universities Dictionary contains the definition of such words as have passed into our common speech. Besides this, in its appendix it contains a real treasury of facts useful in everyday life. Our coupon, appearing in today's paper, explains our good fortune in being able to present what is an encyclopedia and dictionary combined and in convenient form for daily use. We congratulate both our readers and ourselves on this stroke of good fortune.—(adv.)

Reception at Driving Club To Open League Conference

Invitations have been issued by the Atlanta Junior League to a reception Wednesday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving club, from 5 till 7 o'clock, to be given in honor of the visiting girls, who will arrive during the day from every junior league in the United States and Canada, to attend the conference here.

The guests for the reception will include the members of the Atlanta Junior League and their husbands, the families of the junior league girls, and the friends of the league who will be hostesses during the conference. As announced at the last meeting of the league, no invitations will be sent members of the Atlanta league, but they are expected to be present to act as hostesses.

The receiving line will include the officers of the Atlanta league, Miss Marian Stearns, president; Mrs. Henry Tompkins, first vice president; Miss Elizabeth Hawkins, second vice president; Miss Mai Horne, recording secretary; and Miss Henrietta Tupper, treasurer; and the officers of the national league, who are Mrs. Willard Straight, of New York, president; Miss Margaret Winlow, of Boston, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Haight, of New York, secretary; and Miss Mary Schieffelin, of New York, bulletin editor.

This occasion will be one of the outstanding social affairs of the conference and will assemble several hundred members of society.

Following the reception the delegates will remain for registration, after which dinner will be served. The roll call of the cities, the welcome to and report from all new leagues, followed by an entertainment, "A Taste of the South," will compose the evening's program.

Easter Music At Sacred Heart.

Music of appropriate solemnity and beauty has been prepared for the celebration of Easter at the Sacred Heart church.

There will be a solemn high mass Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The music will be: "Messe Solennelle, No. 2," in G. A. Durand. The choir will be accompanied by the organ played by Frederick A. Bell and an orchestra of eleven instruments. The offertory will be "Hae Diebus," music by Victor Hammer.

The members of Sacred Heart choir are Mrs. E. J. Putnam, Mrs. G. B. Adair, Mrs. T. Smith, Mrs. A. D. Fendler, Mrs. James R. Holiday, Mrs. R. J. Reynolds, Mrs. Elskamp, Mrs. M. B. Porter, Mrs. E. C. Kannappell, Mrs. F. G. Birdsong, Misses Annie H. Lyman, Gertrude Mauer, Gertrude Cervantes, Marguerite Kopp and Carolyn Holiday.

Messrs. G. B. Adair, J. J. McTear, M. G. Dulant, J. E. L. Talbot, C. Kannappell, Charles Schneider, Edward Clerc, Messrs. Dawson and Mr. Stillman.

Frances Willard W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The Atlanta Frances Willard W. C. T. U. held an enthusiastic meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George MacMillan.

The subject of citizenship was the topic of the evening and was very ably handled by the superintendent, Christian citizenship, Mrs. Amelia K. Woodall.

Claud Ashley, councilman from the fourth ward, gave an interesting address on representative government, explaining fully the details of both the two new charters now being brought before the people.

Miss Battle to Sing.

At the North Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday night Miss Margaret Battle will sing the difficult aria from Handel's "Messiah," "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth," a part particularly suited to her voice, which is a beautiful lyric soprano.

Though she has been in Atlanta less than a year, Miss Battle has achieved an enviable place among the city's artists and her work in operas has been most favorably received. The public is cordially invited to hear this special program and Miss Battle's many friends will be glad of the opportunity to hear her in this exquisite song of the resurrection.

Mrs. Little to Give Small Luncheon.

Mrs. John D. Little will entertain a party of ten ladies at luncheon today at her home.

Miss Collinsworth Is Honor Guest.

Miss Virginia Martin was hostess at a bridge-luncheon Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. T. Martin, in honor of Miss Kathleen Collinsworth, a bride-elect of next Wednesday.

Bowls and baskets of spring flowers decorated the rooms and the luncheon table.

The honor guest was given a hand-embroidered towel, and the other prizes were dainty novelties.

Mrs. W. T. Martin and Mrs. William Bennett Martin assisted in entertaining.

Busy Kentucky Public Official Says Theodor's Black-Draught Helps Him Keep Physically Fit. "Never Without It."

Clay City, Ky.—"I have been in business here for twenty-one years; am also coroner, riding the Kentucky hills and hollows in all kinds of weather and under all kinds of conditions," says Mr. Sam T. Carr, of this place. "To be able to do so, I must keep physically fit, and Theodor's Black-Draught is my stand-by."

"These trips used to give me headaches, and that, I found, came from hurried meals or from constipation. I was convinced that Black-Draught was good, so now I use it, and it gives perfect satisfaction. It acts on the liver, relieves indigestion, and certainly is splendid. I am never without it."

When you have a feeling of discomfort after meals, causing a bloating sensation, headache, bad breath and similar common symptoms, try taking a pinch of Black-Draught after meals—a pinch of the dry powder, washed down with a swallow of water. This has been found to assist the stomach and liver to carry on their normal work, and helps prevent, or relieves, constipation.

Your druggist can supply you with this well-known, purely vegetable liver medicine. Insist upon Theodor's, the original and only genuine Black-Draught powdered liver medicine. (adv.)

Mrs. Mullinix Gives Luncheon For Miss Oliver

Miss Christine Oliver, a lovely bride-elect, was complimented with a beautiful bridge-luncheon Friday, at the home of Mrs. Mullinix, at her home on Peachtree road.

The pretty home was decorated with silver baskets of bright spring blossoms.

The guest prize was a Japanese basket, and French novelties were given for the other prizes.

Mrs. Mullinix wore a spring costume in black taffeta. She was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. N. O. Symms, and her sister, Mrs. B. W. Cook.

Invited to meet Miss Oliver were Miss Margaret Lewis, Miss Flora Belle Reynolds, Miss Nellie Pryor McDuffie, Miss Dorothy Crockett, Miss Nellie Sullivan, Mrs. Charles W. Dunn, Mrs. Palmer Cox, Mrs. R. S. Blanton, Mrs. Walter Costello, Mrs. D. S. Langer, Mrs. J. H. Beasley, Mrs. J. G. Crawford, Mrs. J. T. Bedford, Mrs. T. W. Williamson, Mrs. E. L. Floyd, Mrs. N. O. Symms, Mrs. Joe Ray, Mrs. George Rusey and Mrs. Frank A. Symms.

St. Mark's Circle To Have Hunt.

Circle No. 9 of St. Mark's Methodist church will have an Easter egg hunt this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the lawn of Washington seminary.

The first prize will be a live white rabbit and there will be several other prizes, too.

There will be lemonade, ice cream, candy and balloon tables, grab bags and fish pond. Everyone who comes can expect a good time.

Mrs. Anne Bates Wash and Mrs. Dugan McClosky will be at the gate and all those who have not already purchased tickets may do so from them for 10 cent each.

The formal opening of the Capital City Country club will be an event of interest today.

The Terpsichorean club will hold their regular tea-dance this afternoon, 5 to 7 at Segado's.

Williams—Garrison.

Announcement was made Friday of the marriage last Monday in Carnesville, Ga., of Miss Bertha Williams, of that city, and Dr. D. W. Garrison, of Tate, Ga., formerly of Atlanta. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. W. T. Watkins, pastor of the Tate Methodist church.

The bride is a lovely and charming young woman. Dr. Garrison was a first lieutenant in the army service overseas. Following his return he was associated in practice with Dr. A. H. Cochran, well-known Atlanta physician, later removing to Tate. Following a honeymoon trip to Florida the young couple will be at home at Tate.

Miss Thomas Is Complimented.

Mrs. A. L. Tate was hostess Friday afternoon at a bridge-tee given in honor of Miss Eloise Thomas, a bride-elect of April.

Pots of Easter lilies made a handsome decoration for the reception rooms.

The guest prize was a bid vase, a candy box was given for first prize, and the consolation was a box of hand-made hankies.

Mrs. W. T. Buchanan assisted her daughter in receiving.

The guests included Miss Thomas, Miss Helen Gamble, Miss Lola Buchanan, Miss Mary Frances Bernhart, Miss Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Norwood Griffin, Mrs. Carlos Mason, Miss Margaret Buchanan, Mrs. Alva Kiser, Mrs. John Carson and Mrs. Gardner.

Tickets may be had by phoning Miss Zelpha McGone, Main 4846.

SLATON WILL SPEAK TO JUNIOR CHAMBER

The Junior Chamber of Commerce will hold a forum luncheon at the Peacock cafe at 12:15 o'clock Monday. Former Governor John M. Slaton will be the principal speaker. Entertainment features have been arranged and several prizes will be given away, according to announcement by Secretary Robert L. Troy.

Country Club Cafe.

Cafe service at the Country club discontinued through the winter, will be renewed April 14. Date for formal opening of the club will be announced later.

CHAPTER X.

It was a white night—a night so brilliant that the village lights far below in the hollow all but lost their own identity in the radiance of that huge, pale moon; so white that the yellow flare of the single lamp in its bracket, in the back kitchen of the old Bolton place on the hill seemed shabbily dull by contrast.

Standing at the window in the dark room of the house, peering out from under cupped palms that hid her eyes, Dryad could almost pick out each separate picket of the straggling old fence that bounded the garden of the little drab cottage across from her. In that searching light she could even make out great patches where the rotting sheathing of the house had been torn away, leaving the framework beneath naked and gaunt and bare.

It was scarcely two months since the day when she had gone herself to Judge Maynard with her offer to sell that unkempt acre or so which he had fought so long and bitterly to force into the market. And it had been a strange one, too—that interview. His acceptance had been quick—instantaneously eager—but the girl was still marveling a little over his attitude throughout that transaction, whenever her mind turned back to it.

Once again she found him a different Judge Maynard from all the others she had known, and he had in years since she could remember, been many different men to her imagination. It puzzled her almost as much as did his opinion upon the value of the old place, which, somehow, she could not bring herself to believe was worth all that he insisted upon paying. But then, too, she did not know either that the town's great man had been riding a tilt at his own soul, for several days on end, and just as Old Jerry had done, was seizing upon the first opportunity to save the wounds resultant.

And yet this was the first day that the girl had seen him so much as inspect his long-coveted property; the first time she had known him to set foot within the sagging gate since he had placed in her hands that sum of money which was greater than any she had ever seen before. Under his directions men had commenced clearing away the rank shrubbery that afternoon—commenced to tear down the house itself.

They had been long, those hours of waiting. Not a minute of those entire two days since Old Jerry's departure but had dragged by on lagging feet. And yet now, with night-fall of that third day she became jealous of every passing minute. She hated to have them pass; dreaded to watch the creeping hands of the clock on the kitchen wall as they drew up, little by little, upon that hour which meant the arrival of the night train in the village.

One moment she wondered if Denny would come—wondered and touched dry lips with the tip of her tongue. And the very next, when somehow she was so very, very sure that there was no room for doubt, she even wondered whether or not he would be glad—glad to find her there. The gaunt skeleton of a framework showing through the torn sides of John Anderson's cottage almost unnerved her whenever that thought came, and sent her out again into the lighted back room.

"What if he isn't?" she whispered over and over again. "Why, I—I never thought of that before, did I? I just thought I had to be here when he came. But what if he isn't glad?"

An hour earlier, when the thought had first come to her, she had carried a big, square package out to the table before the kitchen window and untied with fluttering fingers the string that bound it. The little scarlet blouse and shimmering skirt, alive with tinsel that glinted under the light, still lay there beside the thin-heeled slippers and filmy silk stockings. She bent over them, patting them lovingly with a slim hand, her eyes velvety dark while she considered.

"Oh, you're pretty—pretty—pretty!" she said in a childishly hushed voice, "the prettiest things in the world!"

The next instant she straightened to scan soberly the old shiny black skirt she was wearing, and the darned stockings and cracked shoes.

"And—and you would help, I think," she went on musing. "I know you would, but then—it wouldn't be me. It would be easy for any one to care for you—almost too easy. I—I think I'll wear them for him—some other time, maybe—if he wants me to."

But she turned the very next moment and crossed to the mirror on the wall—that square bit of glass before which young Denny had stood and stared back into his own eyes and laughed. Oblivious to everything else she was critically scanning her own small reflection—great, tip-tilted eyes, violent in the shadow and then cheeks and pointed chin—until, even in spite of her pre-occupation, she became aware of the hungry tremulousness of the mouth of that reflection.

JUST NUTS

flected image—until the hoarse shriek of an engine's whistle leaped across the valley and brought her up sharp, her breath going in one long, quivering gasp between wide lips.

In the darkness, a hand on either side of the window frame holding her leaning weight, Dryad stood and waited. Minutes after she knew that he had time to come, and more, she still clung there, staring wide-eyed, villageward. It wasn't a recollection of the empty cottage under the opposite ridge that finally drew her gaze from the road. It was simply because she couldn't watch any longer that her eyes finally fluttered that way. But when she did turn there was a bigger, darker blot there against the leaning picket fence—a big-shouldered figure that had moved slowly forward until it stood full in front of the sagging gate.

And even as she watched Denny Bolton stepped forward from a long contemplation of that deserted building to peer up at his own dark place on the hill. She saw the bewilderment of the big cottage under the opposite ridge that finally drew her gaze from the road. It was simply because she couldn't watch any longer that her eyes finally fluttered that way. But when she did turn there was a bigger, darker blot there against the leaning picket fence—a big-shouldered figure that had moved slowly forward until it stood full in front of the sagging gate.

It was dark in the thick of the underbrush save for the little moonlit patch of the old, familiar clearing where he waited. He stood there in the middle of that spot of light and heard her coming along before she reached him. But when she burst through the fringe of brush he had no time to move or speak, or more than lift his arms before her swift rush carried her to him. When her hands flashed up about his neck and he strained her nearer and even nearer to him, he left her slim body quivering. "Denny—Denny," she murmured, "I'm here—I've come—just as soon as I could! Oh, I've been afraid! I knew you'd come, to—I knew you would tonight! I was sure of it—even when I was sure that you wouldn't."

Minutes he stood and held her against him until the rise and fall of her shoulders grew quieter, before he held her face away, that he might look into it. "Why—you must have known I'd come," he said, his voice ponderously grave. "I told you so. I left word for you that I would be back—as soon as I could come."

He felt her eyes on the once—saw the lightning change flash over her face which always nerved that bewildering swift change of mood. He caught the flare of mischief behind half-closed lids, she tilted her head back and laughed naively. "It wasn't my fault entirely, though, Denny—although I did give him lots of chances, at first anyway. I almost made him tell—but he—he's stubborn."

She stopped and laughed again. But her eyes grew more and more. "I think he's not quite approve of my attitude," she explained. "He thought I wasn't—sorry enough—to deserve it at first. Don't you realize that I stopped him if he had tried. You—see, I just wanted to wait. But I sent him to you—two days ago. Denny, I—I sent something that I asked him to give you—when—when it was over. Didn't you get it?"

He drew out the bit of a spangled crimson bow and held it out before him in the palm of his right hand. "I thought it must have been Old Jerry who brought it. I didn't see him, and no one could remember his name. It—it was just put into my hand when I needed it most. I wasn't sure Old Jerry had brought it, but I knew it came from you, knew it when I didn't know—much—else."

"Then—then if you haven't seen Old Jerry—why—why you—he couldn't have told you anything at all yet, about me."

Denny nodded his head in the direction of John Anderson's house that had been. "About that?" he asked. She nodded her head. And then she told him everything from that night when she had watched him there under cover of the thicket. When she tried to explain how she had chanced to buy up the mortgage on his house, her voice became suddenly small.

Denny, reaching out with his hand-daged hand, swung her around until she needed must face him. "You—you mean you bought it, yourself?" he marvelled.

Then, face uplifted, brave-eyed, she went on a little breathlessly. "I bought it, myself, the week you went away." And, in a muffled whisper: "Denny, I didn't have faith—not much at first. But I meant to be here when you did come, just—just because I thought you might need me—mighty badly. And waiting is hard, too, when you haven't faith. And I did wait! That was something, wasn't it, Denny? Only—only now, today, I—I think I realized that my own need of you is greater than yours could ever be for me!"

She sat, lips apart, quiet for his answer. An odd smile edged the boy's lips at her wistful earnestness. It was a twisted little smile which might have been born of the pain of stinging lids and dryer, achy throat. He could not have spoken at that moment had he tried. Instead he lifted her bodily and drew her huddled little figure into his arms. It was his first face to face glimpse of the wonder of woman.

But he knew now something which she had only sensed; he knew that the big, lonesome, bewildered boy whom she had tried to comfort in his bitterness that other night when she had hidden her own hurt disappointment with the white square card within her breast, had come back all man. He looked down at her—marvelled at her very littleness as though it were a thing he had never known before.

"And—and you still—would stay?" he managed to ask, at last. "You'd stay—even if it did mean being like them?" he inclined his head toward the distant village, "like them, old and wrinkled and worn-out, before they have half lived their lives?"

She nodded her head vehemently against his coat. He felt her thin arms tighten and tighten about him. "I'll stay," he repeated after him in a childishly small voice. "You see, I know what it is now to be alone, even just for a week or two."

He stepped forward a pace and stopped; lifted one hand slowly, as though he did not believe what he saw. Bareheaded he waited an instant after that arm went back to his side. When he swung around and disappeared into the head of the path that led from the gate into the black shadow of the thicket, she lifted both arms, too, and stood poised there a moment before she wheeled and ran.

from sleepy, heavy-lidded eyes. "Why, Denny?" she asked in drowsy curiosity. "Why did you go—why, really? Don't you realize that you haven't told me even yet?"

He rose and lifted her to her feet, but that did not cover the slow flush that stained his face—the old, vaguely embarrassed flush that she knew so well. He groped awkwardly for words while he stared again at the bit of silk in his hand, before his searching fingers found the thick, crisp packet that had lain with it in his pocket.

"The Pilgrim's share of the receipts amounted to $12,000," had been the tale of Morehouse's succinct last paragraph.

Then, it took me almost two months to save $15, young Denny explained in painful self-consciousness.

She understood. She remembered the scarlet blouse and shimmering skirt with its dots of tinsel, and the stockings and slim-heeled slippers. Her fingers touched his chin—the barest ghost of a caressing caress.

"Denny—Denny," she murmured, "I told you that night that you didn't understand. And yet—and yet I'm glad that you couldn't. It was for me—you want. Don't you—didn't you know it was—just because of you—that I wanted them—at—all?"

Old Jerry took the same train for home that Denny did. Sooner or later he had to face the issue: he had to

Slender and boy-like in her little blouse and tight, short skirt, the girl was half-hidden in the hollow of his shoulder. Once watching with his head cocked pertly, sparrow-like, on one side, the old man's eyes went to the white-banded knuckles of Denny's right hand; once while he waited Old Jerry saw her lift her face—saw the big, shoulder-heavy figure fold her in his arms and bend and touch the glory of her hair with his lips while she clung to him, before she turned and went slowly toward the open kitchen door.

Then he started. He shrank farther back into the shadow and edged a noiseless way around the building. But with the tavern lights beckoning to him he waited an introspective moment or two. "Godfrey 'Lisha," he sighed thunderously. "But that takes a load off my mind!"

And he ruminated. "But what's precision that would have done honor to any prestidigitator. And when, hours after nightfall, the train came to a groaning standstill before Bolton-wood's deserted station shed, he waited his opportunity and dropped off in the dark—on the wrong side of the track!

Denny had already become a dark blue ahead of him when, too, turned in and took the long road toward town. Old Jerry followed the big-shouldered figure that night with heavily lagging feet—he followed heavy in spirit and bereft of hope. He was still behind him when Denny finally paused before the sagging gate of John Anderson's half-stripped house. Then, watching the boy's dumb lack of understanding, the enormity of the whole horrible complication dawned upon him for the first time. He had forgotten Dryad Anderson's going—forgot that the house upon the ridge was no longer the property of the man who had entrusted it to him.

When the light behind that half-drawn shade flared up, far across on the crest of the opposite hill, and Young Denny wheeled to plunge into the black mouth of the path that led deeper into the valley, he, too, started swiftly forward. He swept off in desperate haste up the long hill road that led to the Bolton homestead. The light was still there in that front room when he poked a tentatively in-

RETURN CONCERT BY BACHMAN BAND

Musical Organization at Metropolitan Theater to Give Another Radio Program for WGM.

Radio enthusiasts all over the southeast and in cities throughout the northeast have another treat in store for them tonight when Harold Bachman's Million Dollar band, which is playing this week at the Metropolitan theater, gives another concert from WGM. The concert will be given at the Auditorium and broadcasted from the station of the Georgia Railway and Power company.

On Tuesday night Mr. Bachman's band gave its initial concert for The Constitution. Reports from all over the southeast and a number of northern cities told of the concert's being received unusually well. Reports from Atlanta amateurs were to the effect that Mr. Bachman's band was heard as clearly as the Sunday organ recitals by City Organist Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., which are broadcasted by The Constitution every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The band is playing at the Metropolitan on route from its second successful season at West Palm Beach, Fla., to New York, where it will be featured at a big Masonic exposition in the Madison Square Garden in May.

The program for tonight is as follows:

1. Overture, "Stradella." Flotow.
2. Euphonium solo, "Columbia Polka." Rollinson.
3. Harp solo, by John Lauletta.
4. Nymphs solo, "The Flower-Woman." Lincke.
5. Tenor solo, "O Sole Mio." Di Capua.
6. Novelty march, "Some Little Bird." Van Alstyne.
7. Cornet solo, "Remembrances of Liberty." Casey.
8. "Songs From Dixie." J. Bode-walt Lampe.

Last night the regular concert and market reports and news service of The Atlanta Constitution was broadcasted.

Harding Signs Bill Extending Use Of Naval Radio

Washington, April 14.—The bill extending the use of the government's naval radio facilities for commercial and press purposes until June 30, 1932, was signed today by President Harding.

The bill, given executive approval today, does not apply to messages to China. The service to Chinese stations will be terminated January 1, 1932, owing to international wireless agreements. The bill has the support of many business concerns and of various associations of newspaper publishers.

PEABODY TO VISIT COLUMBUS, HIS FORMER HOME

Columbus, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—George Foster Peabody, native of Columbus and noted philanthropist, will visit his former home in June. It will be his first visit to Columbus in years and is anticipated with pleasure by his friends here. Among the affairs in his honor will be a luncheon at the Columbus Industrial High school. Mr. Peabody has made large and generous donations to the Columbus public schools, to the Young Men's Christian association and to Trinity Episcopal church.

Lesson No. 17. The Condenser.

An important function of the condenser, in the circuit of the radio transmitter, is to store up energy in the form of an electrostatic field and then to release this energy by discharging across the spark gap and setting up oscillations of high frequency.

In its simplest form a condenser consists of two conducting surfaces separated by an insulator, known as a dielectric. For high voltage condensers the dielectric may be air, glass, or mica and for low voltage condensers thin sheets of hard rubber or oiled paper.

If two conducting surfaces are so placed that there is a thin layer of air between them and the surfaces are connected to a supply of direct or alternating current, and electrostatic field will be created which sets up electrostatic lines of force in the thin layer of air between the surfaces. If the supply of current is now removed and the surfaces connected, through the external circuit, the electrostatic field will discharge and cause an electric current to flow through the external circuit.

The Leyden jar condenser and the mica condenser are two types commonly used but never under conditions of high voltage where the potential across the condenser may be several thousand volts. The Leyden jar condenser is in general use in marine installations and consists of a copper plated glass jar, with walls approximately one-eighth of an inch thick. Connections are made to the inside and outside coatings of the jar and the jars are usually mounted in a battery of six, connected in parallel. The maximum voltage to which Leyden jars may be subjected is 15,000 volts.

Several Leyden jars are shown connected in the following diagram. When connected in parallel, the outer coatings are connected to the one side of the circuit and the inner coatings to the other side of the circuit. When connected in series, the inner coating of one jar is connected to the inner coating of the next and the outer coating of the next jar is connected to the outer coating of the next, as shown.

Another type of condenser used for high voltages is constructed of glass plates and sheets of tin foil. On each side of a glass plate is glued a sheet of tin foil of such size as to leave considerable margin between the edge of the tin foil and the edge of the glass plate. The plate and tin foil sheets receive a coating of shellac or paraffin and after drying are bound together in groups and the groups submerged in oil. By means of projecting portions of each tin foil sheet the alternate layers of tin foil are connected to common terminals. The limiting voltage of this type of condenser is approximately 15,000 volts.

Glass or mica may be used as the dielectric in high potential condensers due to their ability to withstand high voltages without being punctured. For low voltage condensers, 500 volts or less, oiled or waxed paper with alternate layers of tin foil may be used.

RADIO FANS HEAR EXCELLENT MUSIC

Return Engagement of Miss Marvin and Miss James Proves a Hit With Atlanta Radio Public.

Misses Inez Marvin and Grace James each such a hit with their return engagement in piano, voice and violin selections over WGM Thursday that the radio editor's telephone started buzzing with complimentary messages almost before he had returned from the Auditorium, from which the concert was broadcasted.

Opening the evening's entertainment at 8:10 o'clock, with Masurka by Myanarski, a violin solo by Miss Marvin, with Miss James accompanying, the two girls rippled through a program which included "Two Dan Blues," violin and piano; "Twelfth Street Rag," piano solo by Miss James; "Sweet Lullaby," violin and piano, by Miss Marvin; "Call You Sunshine," vocal solo by Miss Marvin; "Kalanah, Just a Little Love Song," violin solo by Miss Marvin; "My Tee," vocal solo by Miss Marvin; "A Te to Sleep," vocal solo by Miss Marvin; "Schoolhouse Blues," violin and piano, and a whirling finish, by request, "Boy, Wow Blues," with a grand ensemble of Miss Marvin's voice and violin and Miss James' versatile piano.

The two youthful performers had experienced their premiere as radio entertainers Monday evening and the program went through without a hitch. An improved system of transmitters was arranged by Mr. Oliver of the Bell Telephone company which, reports the radio editor, developed, improved the quality and volume of the broadcasting several degrees.

While the radio public seems to have enjoyed the concert most thoroughly, it will probably derive even more entertainment from the Marvin and James recitals after Mr. Edison has perfected an instrument for coordinating motion pictures and radio in order that radio entertainers can be seen as well as heard.

ANSWERS TO 9 QUESTIONS

Radio Editor: I have a regenerative set and can hear the broadcasting very well at times, but at other times it fades out and sometimes it seems to quiver. Will you tell me what the cause of this can be?

Sometimes when the A. or B. volt, battery gets low, the battery current will fluctuate and make the signals do this. It may be that the radio set is not making good contact, or there is a broken wire somewhere in the variometers or vacuum tube. If there is a broken wire it may be making a fair contact at certain times and then it may pull apart and make a very poor one. Better look the whole set over very carefully, as the broadcasting should not do this on a set such as yours.

Radio Editor: When we speak of a pair of 2,000-ohm phones, does it mean that each phone is 2,000 ohms or both together? O. N. As the two phones are connected in series it means the total resistance of both phones. If you will look at a pair of Murdock 2,000-ohm receivers you will see that each phone is marked with a "2" in very small letters.

Radio Editor: I have built both a loose coupler and a tuning coil with a crystal detector I can only faintly hear the music. Can you suggest anything that will help me to get better results? I have heard that a loading coil will help me. Is this so, and if it is, will you tell me how to make one?

You cannot get very good results with a crystal detector because you are located too far away from the broadcasting station. A loading coil will not help you. A loading coil will not give you any louder results.

Radio Editor: Please tell me the letters of the S. S. Paris' Where is station W. O. R. What is the normal wave length of a Murdock loose coupler?

According to the call book in this office the call letters are G. L. C. This department has no information relative to a broadcaster signing W. O. R. A new call book is expected in March 15 has just been published by the Radio Directory and Publishing company, 45 Vesey street, New York City. The price of this book is $1. It lists all amateur and broadcasting stations. The wave length of the loose coupler you mention is about 600 to 800 meters.

Children Will Be Guests At WGM Radio Concert

GROUP OF LITTLE CHILDREN AT ORMEWOOD.

Saturday will be a big day for the youngsters at the Ormeewood court receiving home of the Georgia Children's Home society when they will be regaled with a radio concert from WGM station of The Constitution and will be fed with ice cream, cake, cold drinks and candy.

Many of the officers of the society will attend and will help entertain the children and watch the fun. Robert H. Jones, Jr., the new president of the society, and Mrs. Jones are much interested in the radio concert, and hope that some person with a big heart will install a permanent receiving station at Ormeewood court for the benefit of the homeless children.

SYMBOLS TO CLARIFY TECHNICAL ARTICLES

Layman With Set Should Acquaint Himself With Different Terms.

To the layman's drawings and booklets of sets seem to be very complicated and very often this department has received letters asking for the explanation of the different drawings. The symbols used in radio diagrams are all standard, and with a little study the average beginner can read with ease, any of the radio diagrams. Most of the symbols are so obvious that it seems as if almost any one could understand them, and yet the questions continue to come in.

The accompanying drawing should be cut out and pasted on a piece of cardboard for future reference, not only for articles appearing in The Constitution, but for the booklets seen in the radio magazines. The reason these booklets are given this way is because they are so much easier to draw and also a lot plainer to read, than if all of the apparatus itself is shown.

As is expected that radio will be of use also in staging "big scenes," directors may use amplifiers to coach their companies in distant but difficult to telegraphic advice directions from a distance.

A. N. Smallwood, of Pyramid studios, Astoria, La., has contracted the broadcasting apparatus which is said to be as powerful as that which the American Telephone and Telegraph company is installing in New York City. This station is dedicated to furthering the interests of the motion picture and theatrical works.

Cartersville Wins Athletic Events In District Meet

Cartersville, Ga., April 14.—(Special.)—The largest attendance ever present at a district high school meet in this section gathered in Cartersville Friday and will remain over Saturday for the concluding events.

The athletic events, chief feature of Friday afternoon's program, were won by Cartersville with a total of 23 points; Rome second with 16; Berry third with 12; Dalton fourth with 11; Marietta and Adairsville 8 each; Calhoun 6.

Gilbreath, of Cartersville, was the high scorer of the meet, taking three first places and one second, and running in the half-mile relay race, which was also won by Cartersville.

100-yard dash—Berry, first; Cartersville, second; Marietta, third. Time, 11 seconds.

Running broad jump—Cartersville, first; Berry, second; Adairsville, third. Time, 55 feet 1 inch.

Richmond Federal Reserve Reduces Discount Rate

Richmond, Va., April 14.—The Federal Reserve bank of Richmond announced today that the discount rate on all classes of paper for all maturities has been reduced from 5 per cent to 4 1/2 per cent. This is the third reduction in the discount rate made since November 3, last, when the rate was 6 per cent.

George J. Say, governor of the bank, today said:

"The banks have liquidated a considerable portion of their indebtedness to the federal reserve bank and the result has been a rise in the reserve position of the federal reserve bank from the lowest point, around 40 per cent, to approximately 60 per cent. The federal reserve bank of Richmond in the meantime having paid off all of the money borrowed from other federal reserve banks."

"Of the liquidation of loans made to member banks by the federal reserve bank of Richmond has been brought about by the sale of Liberty bonds, and since the issues of these bonds are now selling at about par, it is not improbable that further loans against the bonds may be paid off by sale of the bonds."

NINTH TO REACH NEW LOW LEVEL

Richmond, Va., April 14.—Reduction of the discount rate by the Federal Reserve bank at Richmond makes the 4 1/2 per cent rate effective in nine of the twelve districts. The 5 per cent rate remains in effect in the Dallas, Minneapolis and Kansas City districts. Whether further reduction of the rate will be expected was not indicated but the impression was gained that there probably will be no further reduction in the discount rate under conditions in some of the eastern districts should warrant a 4 per cent rate.

SOUTHERN PRODUCE ROTTING IN CARS

New York, April 14.—Carloads of radishes, lettuce, spinach and other vegetables sent here for the Easter trade have arrived in such poor condition that the jobbers refuse to accept them and the railroads have been forced to sell the shipments at a loss.

Less than freight charges in an effort to reduce their losses, according to a statement by the state department of farms and markets today, while prices ranged from 40 to 50 cents a hamper containing three to five dozen bunches, more than half going at prices below freight charges, which averaged about 45 cents a hamper.

Lettuce, of which the south sent about 23 carloads, had more than 50 per cent of the shipments rejected. Freight charges averaged 50 cents, while prices ranged from 40 to 50 cents a hamper containing three to five dozen bunches.

Spinach and peas also from the south suffered from the damage by the rise in temperature. The produce dealers are greatly disappointed at the lack of activity in the wholesale market, the department said.

SEES POWER DANGER IN SHIP SUBSIDY

Washington, April 14.—Enactment of the administration merchant marine bill, which would give the shipping powers greater than those vested in the federal reserve board or any other government agency, and might enable the shipping board to "take favorites" in the granting of power to shipping interests, Representative Bland, Virginia, a democratic member of the house merchant marine committee, declared at today's session of the joint congressional hearings on the measure.

Cross-examining R. T. Merrill, research director of the shipping board, who helped frame the bill, Mr. Bland asked whether there was any provision in the measure to prevent abuse of the shipping board's power.

Mr. Merrill responded that if the board expended "too great aid," the limitation of profits feature would completely protect the treasury from any recklessness on the part of the board.

Taking up a contention of Mr. Bland that companies which believed they had been discriminated against, would have the right to appeal from shipping board decisions, Representative Briggs, democrat, Texas, asked the witness whether "this was true."

"As the bill is drafted there is no provision for review of the board's decisions," Mr. Merrill replied, adding that the board could refuse to enter into a contract for aid with any shipping firm believed to be without necessary "ability, experience and resource to fulfill its contract."

Dying New Yorker May Be Victim Of Sinn Feiners

New York, April 14.—Death today was standing by the bedside of Patrick Connor in the reconstruction hospital and ready to seal, perhaps for ever, the mystery attending the apparently premeditated attack on him last night in one of the most exclusive residence sections of the city. The man who fired four shots into Connor's body had been lying in wait for him near the 33rd street entrance to Central park and he was seen by a number of persons talking with another man and a girl, who were to be sought by the authorities.

Connor lapsed into unconsciousness before he could tell the name of his assailant, and members of his family were silent. Around the case, however, there was an atmosphere of cold-blooded vindictiveness that has been missing in most of New York's long list of recent homicide cases. Many reports of Connor's past life, however, either had some fragment of truth supporting it or was romantic enough to be believed as to the effect that Connor, a former Sinn Feiner, had been shot down in retribution for having betrayed his Irish compatriots to the British.

Business Gain In U. S. Continues, Says Bradstreet's

New York, April 14.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

"The general impulse is in the direction of improvement, and retail trade and industry generally are better, despite rains, bad country roads and strikes. The situation is necessarily so irregular, however, that the characterization of 'spotlight' perhaps best characterizes the general outlook. As to the weather conditions, it might be said that the rains at the west, while delaying crop work, holding down spring retail distribution and flooding the country's streams and lowlands, have their compensations as tending to greatly improve future crop and soil conditions. The strikes, however, especially that of the coal miners involving the voluntary idleness of 800,000 men, is virtually a tax on industry as a whole just as truly as are failure and fire losses, and constitute a menace to all trade and industry for a time longer than any other prospects are promising."

Eddie Rawson's Home Run in 8th With Two On Wins Game 3 to 2

Pitchers' Battle Between Frost and Chichester. Teams Meet Again Today.

College Park, Md., April 14.—(Special)—When Rawson, University of Georgia's stellar catcher, caught hold one of Chichester's curves for a home run in the eighth inning here today driving in two men, ahead of him, he broke up a perfectly good ball game, the Dixie lads triumphing by 3 to 2 over the University of Maryland. Previous to this wallup only two Georgia men got on the paths via scratchy

With the exception of the fateful eighth Chichester had pitched sterling ball, and after this inning tightened up again. The College Parkers were the first to score, showing a run across in the first inning, when Paganucci walked, went to third on an infield out, and scored when Bellack grounded into a double play. Maryland registered its second tally in the sixth when Basley got on on an error, pilfered second and counted on Wallis' single.

Frost, pitching for Georgia, yielded but one hit, a double, and held the College Parkers well in hand at all stages. Maryland again meets Georgia here tomorrow.

NAPIER SMEARS CHATTANOOGA IN FIRST LOCAL GAME

Intelligent Pitching Big Help to Crackers In Hating Lookouts

Atlanta Team Hits Well in Pinches and Proves Extremely Pleasing to Home-Town Customers—Mayer and Ripperton Stars.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Intelligent pitching by "Buddy" Napier, smart baseball by his comrades in the pinches, and hitting when matters were on base, combined to give the Atlanta Crackers a 5-0 victory over the Chattanooga Lookouts in the first local game of the season, yesterday afternoon. It is estimated that more than 9,000 spectators witnessed the battle, which should be sufficient attendance to give Atlanta the Southern league attendance trophy for the third consecutive season.

It was the Crackers' second victory over the Lookouts in as many days, and was the third game between the two teams since the championship race started, Chattanooga coping the first by a 1-0 count Wednesday afternoon in the Tennessee city.

Napier was rapped fairly hard by the visiting batsmen, but they were unable to accomplish anything when a punch was needed. Napier was given the kind of assistance by his teammates that wins games and they pulled him out of many predicaments that looked squally to say the least.

George Johnson, former Auburn star, who pitched for the Lookouts, was strong at times, but he lacked the splendid control that makes Napier's exhibition. This same wildness proved exceedingly costly, particularly in the eighth inning, when he issued a couple of bases on balls, both being later turned into tallies by the home crew. Johnson appeared to have plenty of stuff and pitched himself away from peril more than once.

The Crackers scored all their runs in three rallies. They put a runner across in the opening frame, getting the crowd in good humor, and followed with another in the third, but the big inning was the eighth, when Johnson's wildness, coupled with three timely clouts, sent in three local runners.

The customers who watched the preceding Friday left the park with the firm conviction that Atlanta's season would be marked by many games in John Martin's loop. Three bobbles were charged against the homebats, but all proved harmless. To offset these, the home team were treated to brilliant fielding that brought them to their feet many times.

Hitting in Pinches. The most pleasing feature, however, was the work of the Crackers in the pinch hitting department. There were five times when men were in scoring distance that the needed blow was not delivered. Deane, four bases on around until the run was registered.

Smart baseball was played throughout by the localists, this feature being considerably to the success of the first venture at Ponce de Leon. That's one advantage of having veterans in charge, they know what to do with a ball in the spot where rarely execute a move that hurts.

The Chattanooga team again gave evidence of possessing considerable more than was the case last season. Errorless ball was played by these visiting pastimes and not all of their chances were of the made-to-order variety. "Pep" Ripperton has shown remarkable improvement over the ability he has shown in the Southern league in former years, nearly cost Fred Graft a two-run game, a clout that nearly drove the ditch in deep left field, "Pep" just managing to get his glove on the ball after a magnificent run.

Team Is Hitting.

The 'Noogans in the past two games have shown a decided disposition to hit and in case this work continues Strang Nicklin and his crew will be far from the bottom at the close.

Against Bedgood in Chattanooga, Thursday the Lookouts bagged eleven safe clouts, and followed with nine against Napier yesterday. Far from being weak batting, we claim.

Of the many stars that Friday's entertainment brought to the front, Sammy Mayer, "Pep" Ripperton and Bill Holden seem to be entitled to most of the limelight. Mayer hit safely the first three times he faced Johnson, drove in the first run scored by Atlanta on home solo, started the second attack with a two-base drive and figured in another that was cut short just as it reached the danger point for Mr. Johnson and his comrades.

Holden's participation in the glory came through brilliant performance in his sector of the outer garden, a triple to deep left center, scoring Mayer in the third and a single to right which started the three-run rally for the Crackers in the eighth.

Ripperton's Mark. Ripperton, who handled four chances in left for Chattanooga, came through with safe clouts in the first three times he tackled Napier's slants. He failed the fourth time, mainly because Holden succeeded in getting under his terrific drive to right field.

Ripperton's first hit yesterday was a double, making three hits of this variety in a row, as he had a couple in the Thursday game in Chattanooga. His batting streak, broken up by Holden, netted Ripperton five consecutive base hits.

Bill Holden led the field in pinch hitting. Bill's one hit in four attempts drove in two runners in the eighth. Others responsible for the Cracker tallies were Sammy Mayer, Bill Holden and a wild pitch generously donated in the eighth by Johnson.

Fielding features included a splendid double play by the Crackers in the fifth when things looked extremely squally. Croll, first up, was an easy out, but Johnson reached first on Ellam's error and went to third on Ripperton's infield crash down the third base line, the tall hitting Graft and shuffling far enough into the short-field to enable "Pep" to reach second. Smith hit to Ritter, who tossed him out at first. Johnson streaking for home on the play. He was caught between the bases, Ripperton finally bringing him down for the third out.

MAYER'S LONG THROW. Another of the outstanding plays was Sammy Mayer's toss from center field that choked off a runner as he crossed the plate. This throw came in the fourth inning. Anderson started things with a single to short, going to second when Ellam's throw to first was too high. Neiderkorn reached first on a fielder's choice, Napier receiving his grounder and throwing out Anderson at third. Neiderkorn laced a second and went to second on a fielder's choice, Napier receiving his grounder and throwing out Anderson at third. Neiderkorn laced a second and went to second on a fielder's choice, Napier receiving his grounder and throwing out Anderson at third.

The Crackers lost little time in getting to Johnson's delivery. Joe Guyon worked the Chattanooga hurler for a free pass in the first and advanced to second on Ritter's sacrifice. Mayer then singled to left and Guyon scored easily.

Neither side threatened seriously in the second, but in the third after Ritter had been retired, Mayer doubled to center and went to third on Deane's long fly to right. Holden then tripled between left and center, Mayer scoring.

Things rocked along nicely then until the eighth when the Crackers felt the necessity of getting more runs to clinch the argument. Bersen went out for the starter on a high one to right, but Holden delivered a single to the same garden and went to second on Graft's single to left.

Ellam worked Johnson for a free pass and the bases were loaded. The crowd gave Bill Ripperton a good hand as he took his place at the batting station, while the bugs were calling for a safe clout. Ritter responded with a clean hit through the infield and short.

Graft scored, Ripperton drawing a second, while Ellam stopped at third. A moment later Johnson uncorked a wild pitch, Ellam scoring. Napier walked, but Guyon and Ritter were easy infield outs.

Cheats Gallows As Guards Come To Death Cell

Leakeville, Miss., April 14.—Mancie Kelly, condemned murderer of J. F. Green, United States prohibition officer, and W. J. Dunn, marshal of Richton, never saw the grim rope of death as prescribed by the court, but took his own life a few minutes before the execution was to take place. The deed was done with a small pocket knife that Kelly had concealed in his shoe, and he slashed his throat just as the procession was entering his cell to carry him to the gallows.

The suicide was in the presence of a deputy who was in the act of opening the door to Kelly's cell to allow him to go to the gallows. Kelly, who was waiting in the cell, saw the deputy and the rope was in his perfect condition, Sheriff Walley having attended to these details before Kelly was brought here for execution. Kelly was brought here for execution. Kelly was brought here for execution.

Kelly was brought from Hattiesburg to the jail here last night by Sheriff Webb Walley and Deputy J. N. Howell and was lodged in the death cell awaiting the noon hour of today, when he was to be hanged in the local jail. This morning all arrangements were completed and the gallows were erected and the rope was in its perfect condition, Sheriff Walley having attended to these details before Kelly was brought here for execution. Kelly was brought here for execution. Kelly was brought here for execution.

Mrs. Kelly said her husband had told her he had obtained the knife from a fellow prisoner in Jackson, who had showed him how to conceal it in his shoe. He left a note saying he alone was responsible for his suicide. Kelly showed signs of nervousness as he heard the procession of officials draw near and, suddenly, without any warning, he grabbed the knife, opened it and slashed his throat, making a deep cut. Rev. Johnson gave the alarm and the physician that was with the officials who were to witness the execution, rushed up and administered what medical attention he could, but it was of no avail.

Mancie Kelly, who was to hang at 1 o'clock, was dead at the time he was taken to the gallows. From the first news that he was to hang today, Kelly kept himself at utmost composure, eating and drinking regularly and showing no signs of nervousness. He is the first to die as the result of the crime for which he was tried.

Bond, another of the party, is under sentence of death. Both he and Kelly were wounded in the battle with the officers of the law.

Woman Attempted Suicide to Guide Hubby as Spirit

Newark, N. J., April 14.—Mrs. Maude Fancher, who swallowed poison yesterday after slaying her baby son, Cecil Raymond, hoped to guide her husband to happiness as a spirit. She is at death's door in City hospital.

The story of her belief in spiritualism was told in the three letters—two of twenty lines each—before she took the poison, one after the baby's death, and the third as she was half-conscious herself.

Mrs. Fancher said today that soon after they were married in Detroit three years ago, he and his wife attended a seance at a private home in that city, and both talked to their dead parents. Since that time, she said, Mrs. Fancher had taken a great interest in spiritualism.

"That seance," he said, "put the whole idea into my head. I thought she could do better for me if she were dead and would guide me to heaven."

Mrs. Fancher's death had been very poor since the birth of their son, and she felt, her letters indicated, that her death would "release her husband of a severe handicap." She took the baby's life because, she wrote, "I thought I could guide him to heaven."

Gompers' Exposure Taken to Heart By Chicago Labor

Chicago, April 14.—The tongue lashing given leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, for supporting the radical ideas of William Foster, has had its effect.

Not only has the Chicago federation repudiated its sanction of the "one big union" resolution, but it was declared in labor circles here Friday that a complete house-cleaning of officers is possible.

Gompers charged that Foster, recently returned from Soviet Russia, where he was accorded a welcome by Lenin and Trotsky, was trying to undermine the A. F. of L. by obtaining a foothold for syndicalism in every big international union in the country.

"Now that Mr. Gompers has expressed his displeasure over our resolution, I feel sure that the matter will be dropped and the situation smoothed out," said Ed Nockels, secretary, in fact, of the "one big union" idea in that resolution. The resolution provided that the matter of a meeting of all the big international unions for the purpose of considering amalgamation be referred to the A. F. of L. If the A. F. of L. sanctioned the idea we were going ahead. As it did not we are through."

Nockels said that the organization committee of fifteen members sponsored the resolution. But he admitted that Foster was a member of the committee, that he had advocated the one big union, and that he was trying to get a minority following in every big union.

The outcome of the Gompers meeting is expected by some labor leaders here to bring about a complete change of officers and policy in the local federation. John Fitzpatrick, a close friend of Foster—they co-operated in running the steel strike in 1910—is meeting with determined opposition by the more conservative element. But Fitzpatrick is not considered as radical as some of the organization committee members and a complete reorganization is expected at a meeting to be called in May.

MEXICANS ORDERED TO TAKE LARRAGA, "DEAD OR ALIVE"

El Paso, Texas, April 14.—According to announcement made at military headquarters in Juarez today, orders to run down the rebel leader Manuel C. Larraga and take him "alive or dead," have been issued by the government to General Arnaldo Gomez, military commander in Tamaulipas. Larraga is reported to have asked for amnesty, and the orders to General Gomez are the reply. A year ago in San Luis Potosi and was granted amnesty, agreeing never to lift arms in revolt again, officers of the Juarez garrison said. His present movement is said to be auxiliary to that of General Francisco Murguia, who from the remote safety of the mountains of southern Chihuahua has been trying to start a general revolution in northern Mexico for nearly a year, officers declared.

ROBBERS THWARTED AFTER GUN FIGHT

Granite City, Ill., April 14.—A $100,000 mail robbery was thwarted here Friday after a desperate gun battle, in which scores of shots were fired. The mail train, carrying a $100,000 in currency in a single mail pouch, was being escorted by C. B. Utley and F. W. Reuter, Chicago postal inspectors, with whom the revolver duel was fought. The $100,000 was in currency in a single mail pouch.

Bullets whistled through the main streets in the business section of the mining and manufacturing town during the battle. The train was surprised by the inspectors when the former were in the act of making away with the mail pouch. They gave the names of "Paddy" Conway, alleged to be a Chicago gangster, with a record also in St. Louis, and Hunter Dalton, national gambler and confidence man.

Chemists Burned.
New York, April 14.—An explosion of chemicals in the Ritter laboratories in Brooklyn during an experiment today severely burned A. Kramer and David Ritter, the chemists in charge. The blast brought the three hundred people at work in the building to the street in 90 seconds. The fire was extinguished before firemen arrived.

Mrs. McCormick Means Dirigibles, Experts Believe

New York, April 14.—Reports that Mrs. Edith Rockefeller Miller McCormick, of Chicago, has become interested in a passenger-carrying dirigible air line, intended to institute travel between Chicago and New York by means of airplanes carrying "200 persons and 25,000 pounds of freight" were received with some incredulity at the aeronautical chamber of commerce here.

Officials pointed out that there is not a landing field in the country equipped to handle the arrival or departure of the gigantic airplane proposed, and that aeronautical engineers consider the building of ships of great size unfeasible.

It is true, they said, that some amateurs have put forth ideas, supported by drawings, of huge machines with vast wing-spans and wheels "as big as a house." But from the aerodynamic point of view, the time is not ripe to attempt the building of such monsters.

Aviation experts believe Mrs. McCormick must be thinking of dirigibles. Several projects are under consideration at present for the establishment of airlines across the continent, but all contemplate the use of lighter-than-air machines.

Two Army Officers Given Navy Cross By Secretary Denby
Washington, April 14.—Acting President Harding, Secretary Denby today decorated two young officers of the army with the navy cross, only for gallantry in action, and seldom awarded outside the navy. The officers were Lieutenants George L. Townsend and John A. Hart, both of whom served in army signal detachments with the Fifth Marines in France.

The citation for Lieutenant Townsend said that in November, 1918, he personally supervised the laying of telephone wires from Beaumont to the first bridge across the Meuse, working under constant enemy fire and "with no regard for his own personal safety." Lieutenant Hart and his men were credited with having maintained telephonic communication between regimental and battalion headquarters, "under shell fire, machine gun fire and gas attacks."

Once upon a time there was a moving picture actor who printed on his cards that he played "everything but pants and children." Cecil Holland, member of the Paramount cast of "The Woman Who Walked Alone," goes him one better. For Cecil played a giant several years ago in a Paramount picture and in the present South African native boy.

Hoover Belittles Rumored American Deaths in Russia

Washington, April 14.—Reports from Paris that American drivers of American relief administration wagons had been killed in Russia by the famine-stricken populace who wanted the horses for food were treated with reserve today by Secretary Hoover. No Americans are driving relief wagons in Russia, he said, and the American relief administration has received no reports of any Americans being killed in Russia.

Famine conditions in Russia are being met to the physical limit of the present capacity of the Russian transportation system, L. A. Wilkinson of New York, who has just returned from a survey of the situation in Russia for the relief administration, reported today to Mr. Hoover. There is every indication that the maximum American program, which Russian officials feared might overstrain their power to transport, will be administered, he declared.

DONALDSON PAYS HIGH FOR VISIT TO THEATER

One trip to the Lyric Theatre, cost Dowse B. Donaldson, a well known theatrical manager, 1919 Model Maxwell Touring Car serial number 60801.

Mr. Donaldson reported that his car was stolen while he enjoyed the evening performance of the Lyric Theatre Thursday.

"It is not so much because of the value of the car, that I am anxious to get it back, but because of the years of service which it has given me in the past, and the natural affection which I have for it," stated Mr. Donaldson.

Any one having information regarding the car will be properly rewarded if they will communicate with Mr. Donaldson at his place of business, 345 Peachtree St., or Ivy 666.
